Lindbergh Stunts.
This Is Fire Week.
Good News of Canals.
British More Sober.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

YESTERDAY morning Col. Lindbergh left Miami at 9:05 o'clock and flew across the water to Havana, 241 miles in 2 hours, 15 minutes. Ten, including his wife, flew with him.

LINDBERGH is a wonderful flier, one of this nation's most precious possessions.

For that reason, it is too bad that he cannot be persuaded to exercise reasonable caution.

An accident to Col. Lindbergh would be, as President Hoover has said, "a great blow to the affections of the United States."

It would also be a great blow to aviation in the United States, which perhaps interests Col. Lindbergh more.

WHEN Col. Lindbergh was stunting recently at Cleveland, he amused himself swooping downward, almost to the ground at terrific speed, suddenly turning upward.

A competent engineer watching the stunt said "his plane weighs 2,000 pounds. The stunt just performed puts a terrific strain on the wings and other parts, equivalent to changing the weight of the plane from 2,000 pounds to 30,000 pounds."

NAPOLEON was not ashamed to send word to Paris that for the sake of France and the army he solemnly promised not to expose himself to danger unnecessarily.

Lindbergh, Napoleon of the air, might well do the same.

SELECTING the anniversary of the Chicago fire, President Hoover proclaims a fire prevention week, urging "the exercise of ordinary care on the part of our citizens." He notes that "for two consecutive years fire losses in the United States have been decreased."

LIFE imprisonment, in every case, for arson might help, and would be justified, since arson indicates willingness to commit murder.

Important, and neglected, is the task of fighting forest fires. Chemists and airplanes should combine to solve that problem.

MR. GOOD, Secretary of War, speaking with President Hoover's authority, says the country is prepared to spend hundreds of millions in addition to fifteen hundred millions already spent for harbor and river improvements. The Secretary says: "The government will link together every part of the country with a chain of inland waterways, making one great artery of trade."

THAT'S good news. The people want national improvements, have plenty of money and, fortunately, they have a president who is an engineer and understands problems involved.

He would rather attend to great, permanent enterprises, and let somebody else attend to bootleg liquor.

THE British Home Office shows drunkenness is diminishing in Great Britain, 9,254 fewer arrests in 1928 than in 1927. Nineteen twenty-eight had the best alcoholic record since the World War.

IT IS SAID, "England is not becoming dry, but temperate. Instead of spirits, the British drink beer and light wines."

Such a program was once suggested for the United States, but it's too late now.

YESTERDAY Italy celebrated the fifty-ninth anniversary of the taking of Rome by Italian troops, putting an end to the temporal power of the Pope.

THE fact that Rome continues as usual to celebrate this anniversary in spite of a recent agreement between the Pope and the Italian government comes as an unpleasant shock to the Vatican.

A laurel wreath, entwined with the colors of Rome, was displayed last night by Prince Boncompagni-Ludovisi on a tablet marking the spot where Piedmontese troops broke through a breach in the Porta Pia.

IN JERUSALEM, trials of Arabs accused of murder and robbery, have started. Six are sentenced to one and two-year terms, no murder proved. Simultaneously at Minsk, Russian Jewish Communists call a meeting to protest against conditions in Palestine.

A fight between Communist Jews and Zionists resulted when the Communists blamed Zionists, and leaned to the side of the Arabs.

The Communists won the fight, then passed resolutions condemning Zionism, the British government and the Socialist International.

THE Yiddish Communist daily, Emes, declared: "Undoubtedly, the Arabs, being in the majority in Palestine, have the sole right to Palestine." "A house divided" is Russia.

19TH DIES, CABARET FIRE PROBED

BLAME LAID AT DOORS OF DETROIT'S OFFICIALS

Night Club Allowed to Run Without Ways of Escape; Proprietor Ordered Held

International News Service.

DETROIT, Sept. 21.—The death toll of the Study Club fire disaster reached 19 today when Roland Lowe, 39, of Detroit, succumbed in a hospital.

Lowe was burned and trampled when more than 200 merrymakers made a frantic stampede to escape as fire swept the night club early Friday.

Forty-eight others were injured in the panic.

City officials visited practically every night club and cabaret in the city last night, subjecting them to rigid inspections and ordering the elimination of fire hazards.

Six separate investigations were launched today to place criminal responsibility for the fire.

CITY BUREAUS INVOLVED

Prosecuting Attorney James E. Chenot announced that his office not only would seek to place criminal responsibility for the tragedy, but would also hold the proprietor to account for allowing the night club to operate without adequate fire protection.

Four city departments involved in the probe are the recreation commissioners', the police department, the building department and the fire commission.

Marty Cohen and Robert Jackson, proprietor and master of ceremonies at the club, were taken into custody of the police.

One official said:

"Cohen tells us he was ordered to install fire escapes nine months ago and although he intended to do so, never did."

CHECK GIRL BLAMED

Cohen was ordered held until a full investigation was completed.

'KIDNAPED' BANK COURIER HELD

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—An 18-year-old stock broker's messenger who told of being kidnaped to explain the disappearance of $512,000 in negotiable securities, was under arrest today for grand larceny.

Milton Alter, son of a tailor, was sent by Stewart C. Edwards, manager of R. V. Hiscoe & Co., his employers, to the Guaranty Trust Company to deposit a certified check for $400,000 and bring back securities which had been deposited as collateral on a loan.

Six hours later Alter telephoned Mr. Edwards from Brooklyn, saying he had been kidnaped and the bonds stolen. He told police that when he came out of the bank two men forced him into an automobile.

The youth was hired 18 days ago after he had written a personal letter to Mr. Edwards congratulating him upon his promotion to the membership of the company.

Eddie Foy, Crash Victim, Improves

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(INS.)—The condition of Eddie Foy, Jr., of "Show Girl," who was operated on Thursday, was reported greatly improved today. Foy's jaw was broken Wednesday in an automobile accident.

Houses in Angora Must All Be Alike

ANGORA, Turkey, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Houses must be alike, even to gardens and fences. A government commission has decreed the razing of structures which do not conform to standards.

PATHOS CRAMS PEACOX TRIAL

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(INS.)—This courtroom drama heralded as "the Peacox Trial" is developing into a strangely complex story.

It's another "American tragedy." Its locale is in prosperous Westchester County and along glittering Broadway but it could have happened anywhere in the U. S. A.

Tragic a figure as is Earle Peacox, the boy who is fighting to escape the electric chair for strangling his wayward wife, Dorothy, there are other principals in this drama almost as tragic.

WIFE'S MOTHER TRAGIC

Frances Newman, for instance. She was Peacox's part-time girl. She made the mistake of "playing around" with "Mr. Peacox," and got herself in an awful jam as a result. She has been in jail for four months and there is no telling when she will get out. She is branded as the "alibi girl" in the Peacox case.

Veteran California G. O. P. Leader Dies

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Hervey Lindley, 75, Seattle capitalist, and well-known Republican leader in California during the last decade of the nineteenth century, died at his home here yesterday. He was chairman of the California delegation to the national Republican convention which nominated William McKinley for president.

Mexican Political Row Fatal to Two

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Two persons were killed, another probably fatally wounded and three less seriously hurt here last night in fighting between supporters of the presidential candidates, Jose Vasconcelos and Pascual Ortiz Rubio. Police gained control of the situation after much disorder.

GREENSBURG'S PORT MAY BE T.A.T. LINK

By AL GOUGH,
Sun-Telegraph Staff-Correspondent.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 21.—With prospects of an air-rail terminal here in the near future, air-minded Greensburg is doing itself proud in a lavish welcome to the hosts of airmen participating in the two-day dedication celebration at Main & Co.'s new 700-acre airport in the mountains here.

The dedication got under way yesterday when well-founded intimation of air-rail hookup was revealed between T. A. T. and the Pennsylvania railroad which operates a 48-hour coast-to-coast passenger service. The transfer point for air-rail travelers under the present arrangement is Columbus to which point passengers are carried overnight from New York. By moving the air terminal eastward to Greensburg, it was revealed, the schedule could be cut five hours.

HANGAR HOTEL READY

Verification of the proposed air-rail terminal could not be obtained from officials of Main & Co. Manrice R. Scharff, president, would neither affirm nor deny the rumor. Other executives of the company readily admitted that the plan had been given consideration.

One hangar is completed and plans have been prepared for two more. A modern tea room and accommodations for overnight lodging have been provided in a newly-erected hotel on the premises.

Between 25 and 30 visiting planes were registered at the new port yesterday and more than twice as many more were expected today.

Among the ships that aroused most attention of the 20,000 or more spectators who thronged the field until dusk last night was a fleet of four ships under the command of

PIRATES-BRAVES CLOSE TODAY

The Pirates will wind up their season's business with the Braves this afternoon on the Forbes Field diamond. Cool breezes have featured the five-game series between the two clubs, the game of today to be the "rubber" contest of the series.

The Oaklanders, however, own quite an edge over the Tribe in the play of the entire summer. Thirteen times in the 21 games staged the Pirates have romped away with the laurel. Yet the Boston boys have been quite troublesome.

Ervin Brame will face the New Englanders in the finale. Ben Cantwell is due to work for the enemy.

Only two more games remain on the Forbes Field card after today and these will not be played until the first week of October.

Kvale's Son Seeks Seat in Congress

BENSON, Minn., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Paul J. Kvale, son of the late Rev. O. J. Kvale, representative in Congress from the Seventh Minnesota District, has announced that he was a candidate to succeed his father.

The Rev. Mr. Kvale, who was a Farmer-Laborite, was burned to death recently in a fire at his summer cottage near Fergus Falls, S. D.

LINDY'S PLANE CROSSES SEA TO HAITI

Mrs. Lindbergh Enjoys Trip, Keeps Record in Diary; Save Time on New Route

International News Service.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Sept. 21.—The Pan-American Airways pioneer plane, piloted by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, arrived here at 9:30 o'clock from Santiago de Cuba, according to schedule, and was greeted by a tremendous crowd.

It was a gala day for this quaint and ancient city.

Col. Lindbergh, his wife, Mrs. Lindbergh, and other members of the party were guests of President Borno, of Haiti.

RADIO TELLS STORY

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 21.—(INS.)—The story of today's flight of the Lindbergh pioneer air party from Cuba to Haiti was told in a series of radiograms direct from the plane today.

Mrs. Lindbergh, bride of the "Lone Eagle," who is a member of the party on this inaugural flight for the opening of this new passenger and mail service, is enjoying the trip immensely.

After the takeoff at Santiago de Cuba this morning she divided her time between writing, studying maps and watching the scenery.

"MOTORS FINE"

The first message from the plane—the 147-H—said:

"Time, 7 a. m. We hopped off from Santiago de Cuba at 6:56 o'clock. Weather clear. Motors fine. We are heading for Port-au-Prince after circling Santiago. This is mountainous country."

Another message, sent 45 minutes later, read:

"We passed over Guantanamo Bay at an altitude of 2,500 feet. We are leaving the Cuban coast and heading over the water to Port-au-Prince instead of taking the regular land route because of orders to save time.

"We should reach Port-au-Prince about 10 o'clock. The visibility is hazy over the water, but clear with the rising sun. Col. Lindbergh was much refreshed after his night's sleep.

ANNE WRITING IN DIARY

"Mrs. Anne Lindbergh (the Colonel's wife) is dersssed in a blue traveling suit. Col. Lindbergh is wearing a gray suit. Mrs. Lindbergh is writing almost constantly in her diary and

25 Text Book Firms Indicted for Gifts

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The Franklin County grand jury, which indicted Gov. Flem D. Sampson, handed down indictments against 25 text book companies, incorporated in 13 states, charging them with making gifts to members of the Kentucky State Text Book Commission.

The firms were alleged to have made gifts of text books to the members of the commission.

Honolulu Quakes Stir Up Volcano

HONOLULU, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Earthquakes which rocked the volcano Hualalai throughout Thursday night caused ranchers in its vicinity to move their cattle and household goods, in the belief that the volcano, dormant since 1801, might erupt violently.

Dr. T. A. Jaggar, volcanologist, said that eruption was dependent on whether the sharp quakes continued.

MISS FRANCIS CARLSON IN WITNESS CHAIR

Miss Carlson, 18, clerk in the Bank of Telluride, Col., testifying before Federal officials in New York to what she knew of the swindle by which Charles D. Waggoner, president of the bank, is said to have obtained half a million dollars from six New York financial institutions by means of fake code messages.

SCHWAB CALLED IN NAVY QUIZ

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, was called upon by the Senate committee investigating the activities of American shipbuilders at the unsuccessful Geneva arms limitation conference in 1927, to tell today what he knows about the employment there of William B. Scherer, big navy advocate.

Whether he would be questioned about the new angle of the inquiry developed at the opening sessions, the expenditure of $143,000 here by a group of shipbuilders during congressional consideration of the Jones-White merchant marine act, was not disclosed in advance of his appearance.

Bardo insisted that he had entered an agreement to pay Scherer $25,000 solely to observe the "trend" of affairs at Geneva and report to the shipbuilders the truth about what was going on with the hope of getting facts not reported in the newspapers. He described the reports as "nine-tenths bunk," asserted that he was "disappointed over the failure of the Geneva conference, and, when questioned about claims that Scherer had broken up that arms limitation effort, retorted:

"I would be a silly ass to talk about hiring this man without power or authority to break up an international conference."

The $143,000 spent in Washington, he testified, was intended to speed up passage of the Jones-White measure, which was enacted about a year ago.

Henry B. Shope, N. Y. Etcher, Dies

BANKER'S WIFE ESCAPES QUIZ

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Refusing to waive immunity, Mrs. Mary Belle Waggoner was not questioned by the grand jury in the federal investigation of the method used by her husband, Charles D. Waggoner, president of the Bank of Telluride, Col., in fraudulently obtaining $500,000 credit in six New York banks.

Mrs. Waggoner arrived from Colorado in company with her son, Charles, Jr., and Miss Frances Carlson, young clerk of the Telluride bank, in answer to federal subpenas.

Her son was questioned the greater part of the day.

Emanuel G. Kleid, assistant United States attorney, revealed that plans are being made to bring the elder Waggoner, under indictment for mail fraud in connection with his financial coup, to trial within a week or 10 days.

Evelyn Nesbit Sues To Recover on Check

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 21.—(INS.)—Evelyn Nesbit, former wife of Harry K. Thaw, has filed suit to recover $600 from Miss Charlotte Calegrade, on a check alleged to have been returned by the bank. Miss Nesbit is hostess in a cafe here.

GUN AT FEET, BULLET IN HEAD

Oaklander, Partner of Grant Street Coffee Company, In Critical Condition

George Dimling, Jr., 50, a partner of the Dimling-Deverts Company, wholesale coffee dealers, was found shot in the temple in the company office at 630 Grant street today.

Dimling was rushed to Allegheny General Hospital, where his condition was reported as critical. The bullet was lodged in the skull.

IN POOR HEALTH

There was nothing to indicate that Mr. Dimling had been shot by intruders, police said. His employes reported his health had been poor for several months.

Dimling was found slumped in a chair in his office on the second floor of the building. His eyeglasses lay on the desk, apparently having been removed before the shooting. A .32 calibre revolver was at his feet.

ALONE IN OFFICE

Dimling was the first to report to the office today and was probably alone in the building when the shooting occurred.

A customer entered 15 minutes after the shop was opened and, failing to find anybody on the first floor, investigated. He called Patrolman F. W. Kuehner from Grant street.

Mr. Dimling is married and has three children, a son and two daughters. He resides in Dawson street, Oakland.

Auto Agency Rocked By 2nd Bomb Blast

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The second bomb attack against an Oak Park automobile sales agency was made early today, a dynamite "pineapple" exploding at the rear door of the Marquardt-Smucker Automobile Sales Company. The damage was estimated at $3,000. Three salesmen were thrown to the floor by the blast. A month ago a similar bombing occurred a block away at the Oak Park Sales Agency.

Wright, Ex-Tennis Champion, Divorced

RENO, Nev., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Beals C. Wright, former United States tennis champion, was divorced here by Dorothy H. Wright, who charged her husband with cruelty. She alleged that he found fault with her, that he was indifferent and neglectful. An agreement between the two parties was made a part of the divorce order. Mrs. Wright receives custody of their two children.

Pauper Left Legacy By Duke Dies at 78

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—W. N. Price, who spent 26 years as a public charge, then received a legacy of $12,000 from the late James Duke, tobacco magnate, at the age of 78, is dead here two years after he received his inheritance. Mr. Duke was a cousin of Price's mother. Price left $9,000 of the legacy to a married daughter.

Hit-Run Drivers To Carry Own 'Trap'

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—An automatic catcher of hit and run motorists has been invented. A device under the chassis of a car at the instant of impact throws a winking glare on the license plate and slows the car's speed.

Money for Blind Misused, Legislator Charges

The arrest of a blind woman for begging on downtown streets today resulted in a strongly-worded attack on the Pennsylvania Association for the Blind.

Himself blind, State Representative Matthew Dunn, of the Sixth Legislative District, went to Morals Court to defend the woman.

"If," Dunn asserted, "half of the money collected in drives for the blind was really spent for their benefit they wouldn't have to beg.

"The blind are excellent bait to be put on a hook to attract money which is spent for other purposes.

"In Pittsburgh there are 750 blind persons. If the adults were given work at $15 a week they would be glad to quit begging."

Hero Gets Medal, Man He Rescued Missing

Irony is stamped on the medal which will be presented to Edward C. Pritchard, a lineman of the Duquesne Light Company, today for saving a life.

Four months ago today Pritchard saved the life of Harry Steuernagel, of 3950 Oakdale avenue. In his garage Steuernagel had been overcome by the fumes from the exhaust of his auto.

For more than an hour Pritchard worked feverishly over Steuernagel. He succeeded in bringing him back to life.

Today Pritchard will receive a medal from the National Safety Council.

But Steuernagel will not be present to add his thanks. And this note, contained in a special delivery letter to his wife, is the only clue to his whereabouts:

"Goodby, Nellie. If you and God forgive me, I'll meet you over there, Harry."

DARES CHILL OF BLEAK NORTH

Shivers in Warm Bed Near Stove, But Goes to Prove Man May Defeat Elements

LAKE JAMES, Lac De St. Jean Country, Que., (Via Normandin, Que.), Sept. 21.—The party accompanying Burt McConnell, famous explorer and editor, into the north Quebec woods completed the first stage of the journey yesterday afternoon.

This morning early we go forward by water, two canoes lashed side by side catamaran fashion and propelled by an outboard motor taking us 18 miles to the fork of the Mistocaponamo and Washimeska rivers. There we will lunch and there the committee that is seeing to it that McConnell carries out the terms of his contract will make its base.

In the afternoon McConnell accompanied only by Chief Forester Inspector McKibbin, will proceed 20 miles farther. McKibbin will probably remain with McConnell a short time to point out the boundaries of the woodland that will be his home from now until Thanksgiving time.

STARTS ALONE

Then McConnell will be alone—very much alone because even the birds and animals of the forest will give the stranger a very wide berth. McKibbin will unload the canoe of cameras and typewriter, a few sticks of oak, ash and cedar picked up along the way and in return will divest McConnell of his warm clothing.

McConnell will turn his automatic cameras on himself, handing over his coat, woolen wind-breaker, plus-fours, woolen stockings and shoes to McKibben. The guide will bring this light load and the exposed films back to the base camp and McConnell will trudge on into the bush, his tender feet wincing from the stones and the cold, north wind whistling through his beeveedees. McConnell is still resolute, but he himself raised the question why this experiment couldn't be carried out in Florida.

This was upon arising after a night in a real bed and under three Hudson Bay blankets. Also this bed was not more than eight feet from a two-story stove burning cordwood and in a well-built house.

COLD UNDER BLANKETS

Yet, McConnell admitted that he had been too cold to sleep well. How on earth he's going to endure this same brand of cold weather when he is au natural and al fresco is certainly a mystery to the rest of us.

At Normandin our arrival was a matter of considerable excitement to the townsfolk. Ours was the first party of Americans ever to set out into the woods from there and a crowd of 20, a veritable mob for a town of that size, assembled.

Near at hand are several families of Bullhead Indians, most of whom live in tents, but one family has a cabin with a black bearskin drying on the side. The Indians subsist entirely by hunting and trapping. They also gather blueberries which grow most prolifically in the burned-over areas, big, juicy blueberries that are a delight to eat, and more important, th lure the blackbears just as much as honey does. And McConnell will need to meet a bear.

Terrible enough to have her daughter killed as she was, but now the mother finds herself in the position of having to take the stand and fight with every fiber of her being to refute implications that her Dorothy was anything but "a good girl."

NO DETAIL SPARED

Miss Newman, a Broadway dance hall hostess when she met Peacox, has told her story in all its details. Mrs. Heinzelman is in the midst of hers. She will resume the stand Monday for further cross-examination. There was no session of court today.

There are other pathetic figures, of course—Peacox's bewildered mother, who sits by his side in court each day, and Dorothy's sad-faced father who seems to be in a daze. But for the purposes of this article, Frances Newman and Mrs. Heinzelman are enough.

Frances isn't what is generally regarded as a "good girl" but she isn't as bad a girl as the defense has portrayed her. She was just one of those Broadway dance hall hostesses who liked a good time and wasn't any too careful. She met Peacox when he and his wife had parted. He came into the dance hall where she fox trotted at 10 cents a fox trot and they "stepped a few" while the jazz band blared. They became chummy and afterward he took her to Child's for a feed and that was the start.

BECAME PALS

Well, they became sort of pals after that, even though "Willie" didn't like the idea of Frances going out with other fellows. Who was Willie? Frances explained that "Willie was the boy friend whom I used to go with." If Frances had any father or mother, or any other boy friends besides "Willie," she didn't mention them.

Peacox evidently knew his way around. He had been accusing Dorothy of "running around" with other men in New York, but at the same time he was doing the very same.

Now, Frances wasn't like some of the girls on Broadway. She wasn't a "gold digger." With emphasis, she denied that Peacox had ever given her a cent. She was one of those girls who can be satisfied with a little. For example, while Dorothy thought the Peacox home in Mount Vernon was "an old dump," Frances thought it was "simply grand," with the emphasis on the grand. There was something pathetic about Frances as she testified.

Police Investigate Death of Woman

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 21.—State police are investigating the death of Daisy Dixon, 35, Negro, of Pricedale, who died Monday evening. The woman is believed to have died after drinking a quantity of whisky.

Dedicate Shrine Of Nancy Hanks Sunday

KEYSER, W. Va., Sept. 21—(AP.)—Dedicatory exercises will be held Sunday afternoon at Doll's Gap, near here, at which time the birthplace of Nancy Hanks, mother of Abraham Lincoln, will be marked by authorization of the state legislature.

The principal address will be made by Dr. William E. Barton, student and writer and recognized authority on Lincoln.

WOMAN ADMITS SHOOTING MAN

Betty Windsor, 28, admitted in Morals Court today that she had shot John Mellet, 22, of Haldane street, Hazelwood, at the door of her apartment in the Craft apartments, Craft avenue, late last night.

"I didn't want to shoot him," she explained. "I just wanted to frighten him and his friends away. They were bothering me."

Henry O'Neil, 22, of Coleman street, Hazelwood, testified that he, with Mellet and four other men, had rung the bell of the apartment and that Miss Windsor had instructed them to return in 15 minutes.

They returned, rang the bell again and were greeted with a shower of bullets through the panels of the door, O'Neil said.

O'Neil, who described himself as a city inspector, denied that they had tried to break down the door.

Mellet was shot in the breast and leg. In the Mercy Hospital he was reported in a serious condition.

Miss Windsor and five men, including O'Neil, were held by Magistrate A. D. Brandon pending result of Mellet's wounds. The other men are docketed as Howard Felding, 23, of Stanley street; Charles J. Shanahan, 25, of Haldane street; Francis O'Hanlon, 23, and Edward J. McCloskey, 26, of Coleman street.

Woman Uses Skirt To Flag Train; Saves Man

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 21.—The automobile driven by Clarke Yost, Glover Gap salesman, plunged off the road at Fallen Timber, near Smithfield, turned over three times and crashed upon the Baltimore and Ohio tracks, pinning him beneath.

Mrs. Alonzo A. Craig, a farmer's wife, saw the accident from her home, and rushed down the track in time to flag passenger train No. 42, bound for New Martinsville. She used a strip torn from her skirt.

Yost was seriously injured.

THAW AIRPLANE DEAL DENIED

Attorney James M. Magee today branded as ridiculous reports that he and Col. William Thaw, famous war ace, had bought the Lone Eagle plant of the Moundsville (W. Va.), Airplane Corporation and planned to remove the plant to Pittsburgh.

Magee admitted having considered purchase of the plant, but emphasized that the negotiations had not reached the stage where they warranted serious consideration.

Col. Thaw has been out of the city all summer.

The report, out of Wheeling, said that a new factory was to be built near Bettis Field with a production schedule of four planes daily.

Pittsburgh Officer to Address Reservists

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 21.—Lieut. Col. Swift, of Pittsburgh, an artillery officer attached to the staff of the Ninety-ninth Division, will be the speaker at the first fall meeting of the Shenango Valley Chapter of the Reserve Officers' Association to be held here on October 3.

ELECTION ENDS CATHOLIC MEET

Election of officers yesterday completed a two-day session of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women in Synod Hall, North Craig street. Those elected were:

President, Mrs. Thomas P. Horan, re-elected; vice presidents, Mrs. R. D. Kennedy, Mrs. Walter D. Brown, Mrs. H. M. Bolger and Miss Josephine I. Nixon; executive secretary, Miss Catherine A. O'Donnell; financial secretary, Mrs. M. A. Bittner; treasurer, Mrs. L. J. Felnaugle; board of directors, Mrs. Anne E. Felix, Mrs. John H. Roney, Mrs. E. J. Sullivan, Mrs. T. J. Sweeney, Mrs. R. A. Good, Mrs. Rose Braun, Mrs. I. A. Mamaux, Mrs. John R. Hermes, Mrs. L. E. Collins, Mrs. B. J. Hannegan, Miss Ellen McCarthy, Mrs. M. H. Demond, Mrs. James F. Dezort, Mrs. Carl P. Seyler, Mrs. J. H. Clark, Mrs. Leonard P. Shea, Mrs. George J. Rudolph, Mrs. T. J. Pace, Mrs. Mary C. Coal, Mrs. Thomas J. Flynn, Mrs. J. J. Studeny and Mrs. George Zeuger.

Capt. Hal Bazley, chief pilot of Curtiss Flying Service, Pittsburgh. Capt. Bazley and his pilots gave a brilliant exhibition of stunting and straight flying. One of his ships, a Commandaire sport plane, was flown here by the youngest licensed pilot in the United States, Louis Strickler, 16, of Latrobe.

Strickler, an aviation prodigy, graduated from the Park School of Aviation, St. Louis, and has recently accepted a post under Capt. Bazley as a demonstrator.

DARING STUNTS IN AIR

Freddie Lund, chief test pilot for the Waco Company, gave a breathtaking exhibition of stunt flying in a new tapered wing model. He performed the difficult outside loop, flew upside down and capered around the skies for almost an hour, rolling over and over in a series of barrel rolls and spirals.

His exhibition was supplemented by another fully as daring and awe-inspiring by C. D. Venet, of Johnstown, in a Pitcairn sport mailwing. Both fliers were to repeat the performance again today. In a friendly competition with three naval pilots from Anacosta Field, Md.

An aerial parade at 1 o'clock this afternoon was to start the day's activities. Upwards of 100 commercial planes were to take part in the cloud-skimming procession over Greensburg and Latrobe and back to the field.

Balloon strafing, parachute jumps by Joe Crane, internationally famous dare-devil, dead-stick landing by navy and commercial planes, sight-seeing tours in the air, aerobatics and a program of speeches by Congressman Adam Wyant and others were scheduled for later in the day, followed by a final round-up of pilots on the field for the final salute to the new airport at 5 o'clock.

WARN OFFICERS AGAINST 'RIDE'

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 21.—(INS.)—A former North Carolina prisoner, pardoned a few months ago, has written ex-Pardon Commissioner Edwin B. Bridges, of Charlotte, to warn three of the prosecuting attorneys in the Aderholt murder trial that New York gunmen are being sent to Gastonia "to take them for a ride."

The letter, according to Bridges, apparently came out of a sense of gratitude for his aid in securing a pardon for the long-term convict. The former prisoner is also known to Judge H. Hoyle Sink, who succeeded Bridges as pardon commissioner. Both are willing to place credence in it.

"BUMP OFF" PLANNED

The prisoner wrote:

"They are raising money to bump off Mr. John Carpenter, Maj. A. J. Bulwinkle and Clyde R. Hoey. Please warn these men."

An inquest into the killing of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, strike martyr, is scheduled to be resumed by Solicitor John Carpenter today, but it was learned that no witnesses have thus far been summoned, and the prosecutor will ask for a continuance of the probe until next Saturday.

MASS OF PROBES

A postponement of the inquiry will be necessitated because the solicitor for the past week has been swamped with an amazing mass of probes and presocutions that have grown out of the so-called Communist-Fundamentalist warfare which followed in the wake of left-wing labor activity in this center of the new industrial South.

Meantime the authorities settled down to the regular Saturday vigil. Most of the night-riding activities break out on Saturday nights. This is because Saturday is a half-holiday hereabouts, and here and at outlying cross roads stores crowds congregate for a Saturday night's carousal.

CECIL YIELDS ON RESERVES

GENEVA, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Lord Robert Cecil today withdrew the British disarmament resolution regarding trained army reserves, which has stirred League of Nations debates this week, and accepted a compromise proposal which he declared accomplished the purpose of the British government.

Lord Cecil said he thought he might win if he pressed the British resolution to a vote, but believed that a decision by a narrow margin either way would have an unfortunate effect on the cause of disarmament.

Links Hill Road To Open Thursday

MONONGAHELA, Pa., Sept. 21.—Next Thursday has been set for opening the improved portion of the Links Hill road of the Pittsburgh and Monongahela pike between New Eagle and Finleyville. The route is a portion of State Highway No. 88. About 70 per cent of the improved portion has been relocated and several dangerous curves removed.

HINT PANTAGES CASE PERJURY

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—(INS.)—Possibility of bringing perjury action against several defense witnesses in the murder trial of Mrs. Alexander Pantages was being considered today by District Attorney Buron Fitts.

An investigation, it was stated, was begun into details surrounding the stories of several persons who testified for the defense of Mrs. Pantages who is charged with second degree murder in connection with the death of Juro Rokumoto in an auto crash.

A man and a woman who have testified in the case are principally mentioned in the contemplated action. These two told stories on the witness stand, it is said, that are different than those told to investigators shortly after the crash.

Results of the investigation would be laid before the grand jury if the facts warrant it, it was reported.

LINDY'S PLANE IN HAITI

studying the route upon the map. She won't make any statement, but she is having a wonderful time. Col. Lindbergh asked that no attempt be made to interview his wife.

"We encountered headwinds, but they are not bad."

NEARING LAND

Next came this radiogram telling of encountering stronger headwinds:

"Time 8:15 a. m. We are now encountering fairly strong headwinds. The water hop from Guantanamo Bay, where he left the Cuban coast, to Port-au-Prince is 231 miles. We tried to talk by wireless with the (United States) naval base at Guaptanamo, but could not raise any one. Now we are 50 miles off the Cuban shoreline, and should sight land in the region of Gonaive Island in about 40 minutes. It is about a 140-mile water hop from Port-au-Prince. How is everything there?"

At Port au Prince, Haiti, a program of official greeting has been planned by the president. The flight of 269 miles to the Haitian capital will require about three hours.

From Port au Prince, the voyage lies to Santo Domingo, capital city of the Dominican Republic, which should be reached shortly after noon.

SOVIET PLANE SPANS PACIFIC

MOSCOW, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The Russian plane Land of the Soviets was reported by the Soviet News Agency Tass to have landed early this morning on Attu Island, the extreme west of American territory in the Aleutian Islands.

The agency reported that the plane left Petropavlovsk, Kamchatka, en route to New York, last night and covered the 750 miles to Attu Island by way of Bering Strait at an average speed of 112 miles an hour. A violent storm raged while the flight was in progress.

The next stop planned is at Dutch Harbor (Unalaska), whence the plane will proceed to Seward, Sitka and Seattle.

The crew of the plane consists of Pilot S. A. Shestakov, Second Pilot P. E. Bolotov, Navigator S. V. Sterlingov and Mechanic D. V. Fufaey.

CUT OUTPUT, ONLY CURB FOR DOPE

Unless Manufacture Can Be Curtailed, the Battle Will Be Lost, Expert Declares

By PROF. DR. LOUIS LEWIN

Faculty of the University of Berlin. Internationally-noted authority on narcotics. Author of many books and treatises on the drug peril. Member of the Medico-Legal Society of New York.

(This is the fourth article in a special series by world leaders in the fight on narcotics.)

BERLIN, Sept. 20. — The question of narcotics has become a world question.

No nation in the world can say that it is free from this universal evil.

Slowly it has developed and progressed, and today the army of those who take narcotics, such as morphine, opium, cocaine and other drugs, numbers millions upon millions.

And there is no standstill. Like an infectious disease, this whole calamity comes rolling over the oceans and dividing mountains.

SOON BECOME SLAVES

New victims often start by taking dope from mere curiosity or inquisitiveness—or to imitate others; but very soon they find that they are hopelessly lost to it—slaves.

Usually they end up seriously as the disease-wrecked individuals who take drugs for medical relief and prove a burden to themselves and others.

But what can be done against this abuse and misuse?

I suppose there are some statistics kept in the United States about the importation of narcotics and the consumption of opium and opium preparations (also extracts and tinctures) for medical purposes. If this is done, the quantity that is used for improper purposes can easily be ascertained, as the difference between the quantity imported and the quantity used for medical purposes must have been improperly used.

GERMANY STRICT

In Germany, all imports of opium and other narcotics are carefully registered. Also the wholesale dealer, retail seller and chemist are watched closely and controlled.

For instance, the chemists cannot buy narcotics as they please. They must first obtain permission from the authorities in question. They are visited from time to time by an official physician who compares the quantities bought with the quantities sold on a doctor's prescription.

For this purpose selling agencies are compelled to keep a special book in which all prescriptions are entered. The difference between the two must represent the stock in hand.

If the dealer cannot show the correct difference and has no proper and convincing explanation, he is punished severely. In this way the importer and producer are controlled by the customs officials and the re' 'l seller by the Department of Health.

PHYSICIANS CURBED

Physicians also are controlled and if it is found that they prescribe narcotics for anything but medical purposes, a very severe punishment awaits them.

In extremely provocative cases, the doctor may expect two or three months' penal imprisonment.

But all these precautions do not touch the evil at its root. So long as there are no international regulations of the production of narcotics, there will be no cure for this world evil.

In South America—Bolivia, I believe—there are large factories in which the plant product is turned into large quantities of raw cocaine. I have even been asked myself to frame regulations for the guidance of chemists, wholesalers and retailers.

But, regardless of what other regulative measures are taken, just so long as large quantities of dope can be sent all over the world without any control, smuggling and stealing these narcotics cannot be stopped.

Accuser of Bishop Marries Governess

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The Rev. John P. Ingerslew, whose charges against Bishop Anton Bast while Mr. Ingerslew was pastor of a Methodist Episcopal Church in Copenhagen, Denmark, resulted in the ousting of the bishop, was married to Miss Lissa Madsen, 23, who for three years has been governess to the three Ingerslew children. Bishop Bast was convicted of misuse of church funds and besides being ousted from the church, served a team in a prison in Denmark.

State Will Survey River Highway

FRANKLIN, Pa., Sept. 21. — The State Highway Department plans a survey of the proposed Allegheny River road, Oil City to Tionesta, within the next few weeks. This will determine the best route for the road, which probably will run from Oil City along the south side of the river to President, there crossing to Baum Station via a new bridge, and skirting the north side of the river to Tionesta.

CHECK BEGUN ON VOTE LISTS

The county grand jury investigating registration frauds today took its first step to purge the voting lists when it ordered county detectives to check a list of 1,000 or more residents of the Third Ward whose names were on the assessment books.

On several pages of the list appeared the names of Joseph Engelsberg, organization leader in the Third Ward, and Charles Solomon, County Detective Chief George W. Murren reported.

Murren received the lists today after the grand jury, in recessing, had ordered the check.

Further testimony on alleged fraudulent voting was invited in a statement by District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner last night. The statement follows:

"We are attempting to make a full and complete investigation of election irregularities.

"To that end we will welcome information from any source. Any person having knowledge of the matters before the grand jury is welcome to testify either in person or in writing.

"We still are plugging away. A conference to be held Monday will clarify our program."

He referred to the conference of the Allegheny County Bar Association committee, representatives of the three mayoralty candidates and himself which will be held at 10 a. m. Monday to discuss the progress of the alleged fraud investigation.

JURORS' FURY FREES CO-ED

NEW BRAUNFELS, Tex., Sept. 21.—(INS.)—Rebecca Rogers, former Texas University Co-Ed who was charged with the robbery of the Farmers National Bank, of Buda, Tex., is a free woman today, as far as the state is concerned.

Her jury, following a 50-hour deadlock, was discharged last night without agreeing on a verdict, and the girl who was accused of robbing two bank clerks of $1,000 at the point of a revolver was assured of her freedom when District Attorney Fred Blundell announced that he is "through with the case."

Five times yesterday the jury demanded the court to discharge them when it was evident that the ballot would remain 9 to 3 for acquittal. Each time the judge ordered the jury to deliberate further.

The 12 jurors deliberated by kicking on the jury room door and shouting their demands for discharge. Bailiffs reinforced the door when the hinges showed signs of weakening under the blows from the square-toed boots of the jurymen.

The trial was the third Mrs. Rogers has stood. The first trial resulted in her being sentenced to the penitentiary for 14 years. The sentence was reversed on appeal, however, and sent to La Grange, Tex., for trial. The second trial resulted in a mistrial, as did the last one.

Mrs. Rogers was defended by her husband, whom she met and married when both were students at the University of Texas.

Scores of Voyagers Searched for Liquor

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. — (AP.) — Despite a recent announcement indicating that prohibition officials had decided to abolish the practice, customs guards stationed at the French Line pier last night searched scores of men, including visitors, messengers and minor officials of the French Line, prior to the sailing of the liner France. No liquor was found on the men. One woman was found to be carrying two bottles and another bottle was taken from a young girl.

Chicago's Finances Endanger Employes

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Muddled finances of Cook County and the City of Chicago today threatened to cost 1,000 county and 4,950 city employes their jobs by January 1.

John Richert, of the Council finance committee's staff, said the city's financial situation, unless remedied, will necessitate a 32 per cent reduction in departmental activities.

Rube, 20 Years Traffic Mount, Turned Out

Completing more than 20 years in the city's service, Rube, veteran horse of the mounted traffic squad, today begin's his career as a pensioner on the farm at Mayview. There he will lie down in green pastures, will have a warm stable and do no work.

James O. Casto.

In 1909 Rube, then an unbroken 4-year-old, came out of Kansas with 11 other young horses and was given to the newly organized mounted squad. Rube was a bucking colt and refused the saddle. Attempts to mount him resulted in a man being thrown and for a time it looked as if he would not win a place in the city stables.

While Rube was embarrassing several skilled riders unable to control him, a young Virginian, James O. Casto, an experienced horseman, took him in charge. Casto "broke" the horse and then claimed him as his regular mount. For 16 years the peppy Rube and his handsome rider were seen along Liberty avenue, at Sixth street and Penn avenue, and at the Schenley Park entrance. When Casto was obliged to go on foot Rube stood by, his ears pricked up and his head proudly arched. He was the show horse of the city squad.

When the motorcycle superseded horses for the traffic police, Rube was sent to Schenley Park, and Casto, dismounted, was assigned to a corner at Federal and Ohio streets, North Side. It was a sad day when Casto and Rube parted, but Sam McCandless took the horse and rode him regularly on his rounds until a few weeks ago.

Although Rube shows his age in his gait, he has lost none of his oldtime spirit. When Dave McDonald, superintendent of the city stables, decided to make him a pensioner, it was predicted that the stablemen at Mayview would have their "hands full" in handling the unruly Rube.

SINCLAIR PLEA UP TO HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The Department of Justice has announced that the petition of Harry F. Sinclair and Henry Mason Day for commutation of their jail sentences for jury shadowing had been forwarded to President Hoover with a strong recommendation from Attorney General Mitchell that there be no executive interference with the sentences.

Sinclair and Day are serving their terms in the District of Columbia jail, but have been permitted to see each other only occasionally.

Sinclair and Day are serving their gin serving a three months' term for contempt of the Senate, and with five days off each month for good behavior, ended this sentence July 20. However, on June 22, the District of Columbia Supreme Court formally pronounced sentence upon him for jury shadowing during the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial. The court ordered the two sentences to run concurrently and Sinclair will end his stay in jail November 22, with time off for good behavior.

Day commenced serving his term of four months for jury shadowing in the same trial on June 24.

Both Sinclair and Day based their petitions for commutation of sentence, which were filed in August, on the condition of their health. There was no indication forthcoming from the White House immediately as to what stand President Hoover would take regarding the petitions.

Indians Save Woman Wandering in Desert

TUCSON, Ariz., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Delirious and seriously ill after wandering for two days without food and water on the desert, Mae Bundy, alias Mrs. E. Rowell, of Kansas City, was picked up by Indians, nursed back to strength, and later returned to Tucson, it was revealed by John Gungl, United States attorney.

The woman, who was being held as a material witness in a Mann act case here, disappeared September 10 from the rooming house where she had been permitted to remain because of ill health.

4 POSTMASTERS INDICTED

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 21.—Four postmasters were included in 18 indictments handed late Friday by the federal grand jury. They were Harry Miller, postmaster at Rockwood, Somerset County, charged with embezzlement of $1,438.38; Lawrence Goller, postmaster at Harnedsville, Somerset County, $607.54; William T. Williams, postmaster at West Alliquippa, Allegheny County, $408, and James Swanger, postmaster at Fossilville, Bedford County, $157.26.

Paul Cogan, bookkeeper in a Pittsburgh bank, was indicted on charges of making false entries. A true bill was returned against Albert M. Hay, a postal messenger in Mt. Washington, Allegheny County, who is alleged to have stolen $100 from a special delivery letter. Joseph Moshawk was held on charge of stealing from the mail in Westmoreland County. William Edward Knalley and Mike McKrani were indicted on charges of impersonating federal officers in Allegheny County. Lawrence Patterson will stand trial on a charge of using the mails to defraud in Allegheny County.

Brew Limit Is Set At 75 Bottles Per Flat

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The legal dividing line between a home and a beer flat was set by Judge Joseph W. Schulman at 75 bottles of brew.

Mrs. Emily D. Dean, 36, was on trial because Sergt. Clarence Sweeney found 75 botles in her apartment last week. She insisted they were for home use in connection with a forthcoming party.

"Madam," Judge Schulman ruled, "no home can have 75 bottles of beer and not be a beer flat. There is a beer capacity for homes and that is reached at 75 bottles."

But Mrs. Dean was freed, anyhow. The police, it was found, had entered without a search warrant.

MAN HOLDS UP GAS STATION

Two employes at the Aiken Oil Company service station, West Liberty and Biltmore avenues, Dormont, were held up by a robber late last night, who robbed the safe and cash register of $70.

Theodore Paskey, of 2317 Los Angeles avenue, and Harry Henry, of 2330 Bensonia avenue, the attendants, told police that the thief was disguised by strips of adhesive tape under his eyes and on his cheeks. He inquired directions to Morgantown, W. Va., and later asked for a package of fuses. While Paskey was complying with the request, the robber pointed a gun at Henry, forced both men into a rear room, rifled the safe and cash register, and fled in an automobile.

Eckener Won't Be On North Pole Trip

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Dr. Hugo Eckener arrived last night to find the Zeppelin works, from which he had been absent for more than a month, gorgeously decorated in his honor with flags, bunting and flowers.

In a press conference later, Dr. Eckener said he did not plan to participate in the flight to the North Pole in 1930 which Dr. Fridtjof Nansen has planned for the dirigible.

INDICT BANKER AS KIDNAPER

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 21.—(INS.)—A sensation was caused in New Jersey financial circles today with the revelation that Harry Kuller, well known investment broker and real estate dealer, had been indicted by the Passaic County grand jury on charges of staging the kidnaping of Willard H. Elliott, former vice president and treasurer of the Hobart Trust Company of Passaic, on June 26.

Six other indictments were returned. Those indicted were Joseph Bongiorno, alias Kid Steetch, of Passaic, released last week in $10,000 bail as a material witness in the case; Angelo Lapaduro, Passaic sugar merchant, who has not been arrested, and four others named as John Doe, Richard Roe, James Doe and William Roe.

Kuller was released in $25,000 bond after entering a not guilty plea. He charged he was victim of a "frame-up."

Although officials refused to discuss the indictments, it was intimated that Elliott had declined to refuse a large loan to one of the indicted men, and that he was abducted so the money could be obtained. It was reported the money was wanted to finance a large brewery.

Elliott's disappearance last June caused a nation-wide sensation. He was abducted from his car while on the way to business from his home in East Orange, kept prisoner for three days and then released.

Federal Agents Round Up Daring Smuggling Gangs

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Federal agents have seized Swiss watches and watch movements valued at $50,000 which they said had been smuggled into the country in boxes marked "chocolates." Louis Poller was arrested in connection with the seizure.

In another case agents seized uncut diamonds valued at more than $12,000 and arrested a jeweler, his secretary and a printer employed on an ocean liner. The seizure was made through information advanced by a woman agent operating from Antwerp.

Sidney Sherman, a lower Broadway jeweler, was held in $10,000 bail; his secretary, Miss Nina Silverstein, in $1,000, and Charles Ecclairs, printer of the liner Belgenland, in $2,300, in connection with the diamond seizure. Miss Silverstein was said to have confessed and implicated Sherman and Ecclairs.

19TH SUCCUMBS IN CLUB FIRE

for the tragedy on a cloak room girl, said to have thrown the front door open when the first small blaze was reported to her. A draft from the open door caused the flames to spread so rapidly that all escape was cut off, Garvin said.

The small blaze, caused by a match or cigaret smouldering in a curtain, changed in a twinkle to a pillar of flame that swept up the main stairway to the crowded dining room above, consuming rugs, hangings and woodwork and gaining in ferocity.

Two hundred men and women were in the dining room dancing, drinking and making merry. At the first wisp of flame they become panic-stricken and stampeded.

Few were burned in comparison to the scores who were bruised, battered and overcome by smoke and fumes.

GIVEN FOUR PERMITS

"The public was invited to enter the Study Club when four city departments granted licenses for it to operate," Chenot said in his statement.

"This office will seek to place responsibility for allowing such a place to operate. I have ordered the police to keep everybody away from the club and also to take photographs of the interior and exterior of the building.

"We are taking statements of survivors. It is a mass of horror that we are compiling. The public will know all the facts as soon as all the survivors have been interviewed," he concluded.

There were two exits from the dining room of the night club, doors side by side. The entertainers used one. The crowd, ignorant of where the path to safety lay, pushed and shoved to get to that side of the room where the narrow dressing room was located.

35 IN FATAL HEAP

Into this room scores of the dancers rushed in their effort to escape the flames. Inside the room the rush centered at an iron sashed window opening outward. Firemen and rescuers, when they penetrated the blazing room a few minutes later, found 35 persons, some of them dead or dying, jammed in an inextricable heap. Dead and dying were crushed against the smouldering walls.

Eventually the room yielded the bodies of 16 victims. Two others died at receiving hospital. Forty-five others were taken to hospitals and treated for burns, cuts and fractured bones.

Investigation, begun almost immediately, disclosed stories of the living held in the vise-like grip of those who had died.

There were stories of men and women, reverting to the primitive, fighting each other and trampling one another in their efforts to reach the outside. There were also stories of a few successful ones who fought and clawed their way to the two or three windows and hurled themselves out to fall on the concrete pavement below.

Surprise Bachelor Dinner Tendered John Coolidge

PLAINVILLE, Conn., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Eleven friends of Maj. John Colidge sang the swan-song to his bachelorhood with him last night.

They did this at a quietly-arranged bachelor dinner in the Elm Tree Inn, at Farmington, four miles from here. Unaware that his friends had prepared this traditional function Maj. Coolidge, who will marry Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of Gov. John H. Trumbull, of Connecticut, here Monday afternoon, went with them to the inn. There the son of former President Calvin Coolidge found himself the guest of honor at a dinner.

PRESBYTERIAN MODERATOR TO PREACH HERE

Dr. M'Afee to Give Sermon In Shadyside Church Tomorrow; Career Notable

Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, is to preach at Shadyside Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

This will be Dr. McAfee's first visit to Pittsburgh as moderator. He ranks as one of the most brilliant minds in the Presbyterian Church and is the son of John Armstrong McAfee, who, in collaboration with Col. John S. Park, founded Park College at Parksville, Mo.

Dr. McAfee.

After graduating there Dr. McAfee went to Union Seminary, established a great scholastic record and was ordained into the Presbyterian ministry. He served as professor of mental and moral philosophy at Park and later accepted a call to the pastorate of the Forty-first Presbyterian Church, Chicago, which later was merged into the First Presbyterian Church. He was for eight years pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn, from which pulpit he was called to the chair of systematic theology at McCormick.

During the World War he was director of religious work of the Y. M. C. A. with the American Expeditionary Forces abroad. He was the first lecturer under the Joseph Cook Foundation, under which auspices he presented the Christian faith to the people of India, Siam and five other Far Eastern countries. He has for several years been a member of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and was elected moderator of the general assembly at St. Paul this year. He is an author as well as a lecturer and traveler, and is one of the six children of Dr. John Armstrong McAfee, earning distinction in the Presbyterian world.

Dr. McAfee has many friends in Pittsburgh, who will welcome his first visit since his elevation to the moderatorship.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES
DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

SERMONETTE

"PRAYER AND THE SOUL"

A Sermon From Life

"Call Upon Thy God."—Jonah 1:6.

By DR. CLARENCE EDWARD MACARTNEY,
First Presbyterian Church

"I never used to think much of prayer, but now I begin to see there is something in it."

These were the words of a young man of fine inheritance and good station who was struggling with temptation. He had come to ask me to pray with him and for him, lest he should lose his battle. When I had done so, this was what he said: "I never used to think much of prayer, but now I begin to see there is something in it."

As we sat in silence for the moment, broken only by the murmur of the traffic on the distant street, I thought of the sacredness of life and those battlefields where angels and devils contend together for the dominion of a human soul. Knowing himself to be such a battleground, this man who had sought the help of prayer, now began to see that there was something in it.

Prayer reveals the value of the soul. What is prayed over is forever sacred. When a man kneels down to pray for victory in temptation, he faces and contemplates his true and sacred self. In the holy light of prayer, life is invested with a divine dignity. Christ upon the Cross died for the soul, and thereby proclaimed the divine appraisal of man's life. But he also prays for our souls. What Christ said of Peter is true of us all: "I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not."

Prayer shows the difference between right and wrong, and strips the mask of disguise from the evil face of temptation. "How does it seem to you when you pray about it?" I once said to one who came to ask about a proposed course of conduct that was not only wrong, but shockingly so, although the tempted soul did not seem to realize it. "Oh, then," came the quick answer, "it seems to be wrong." Look at temptation in the light of prayer. If a thing is wrong it cannot stand that light, for prayer will no more point the temptation-beset soul in the wrong direction than the North Star will direct the tempest-tossed mariner in the wrong course on the sea.

Prayer helps in the battle of temptation. When I see the crowds on the city's streets in the morning hurrying to their place of work, I sometimes ask myself: How many of these persons who are going into a battlefield where good and evil will endeavor to conquer them, before they started out from their homes have knelt down for a moment and asked God for His grace to help them through the day and bring them again at night unstained and undishonored to their homes? Prayer is a breastplate which the shaft of Satan cannot penetrate, and there is a world of truth in the lines of the old hymn:

> "Satan trembles when he sees
> The weakest saint upon his knees."

One who had been overtaken in a grievous and surprising fault, explained what had happened to him in these words: "I fell when I ceased to pray."

In his chapter in "The Man Who Laughs," where he describes the bark sinking in the English Channel and the ship's company repeating, each one in his own tongue, the Lord's Prayer, Victor Hugo makes the doctor say: "On your knees. Repentance; that is the bark which is never submerged. You have no longer a compass? An error. You have prayer." Yes, prayer is the supreme resource of the soul. It is the bark which never sinks. Even after the battle of temptation has been lost. Prayer shows a man how to start a new fight. The greatest power of prayer is exhibited, not when it forearms us and forewarns us against the day of battle, and not when it inspires our courage and nerves our arm in the day of conflict, but when it whispers its word of encouragement to the man who has fallen, puts a new sword in his hand, lifts him to his feet, and bids him once more go forth into the midst of the battle. Oh, the depth, both of the riches and the power of God! Scarred, stained, broken by sin, a man may be: rebellious, disobedient, disloyal to self, to others, and to God, but if now God can say of such a man, "Behold, he prayeth," his future is bright. God's love is greater than our sin. His power to forgive is greater than our power to wound His heart. However far we have gone from God, God is with us when we call upon Him. Prayer starts a new chapter, creates a new battlefield, puts a new sword in our hand, and brings us into a new heaven and a new earth, where cleansed and redeemed and purified souls walk in the freedom of the sons of God.

Stage and Screen Notes From Theaters and Studios

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

TWO waitresses in an Oakland restaurant get the baseball atmosphere from (a) propinquity to Forbes Field and (b) from serving the eggs and toast, at noon, to Pittsburgh and visiting baseball players.

Havey J. Boyle

That both have an idea that baseball is played is shown by the following dialogue:

"I see where Traynor is going to play professional baseball this fall," said the first one.

"You mean he is going to play in the world series," corrected the second citizen.

"Oh, maybe that's it. I wonder how many Boston players will be in the series this year?"

To the average man this, of course, seems quite ridiculous, because Traynor has been playing professional baseball for many years and because neither Traynor nor any member of the Boston team will be in the world series, and yet—listen to two men attempting to describe the clothes of a woman, and you'll hear far more absurdities than the waitresses offered when they reached into the domain of men.

There is a moral to the waitresses' story which baseball men would do well to ponder. The fact that so many women know so little about baseball obviously is a cue to educate them by means of Ladies' Day. But it will take baseball men a few more years, possibly, to realize that their once entrenched position is steadily weakening.

My information about men knowing little about describing women's clothes is first-hand stuff. Just recently I was called upon to describe the clothes of the wives of three mayoralty candidates, and about the best I could do was to note the color of their hats. Women will never understand such stupidity. Men know pretty clothes, but they can't describe them or tell why they look nice.

AS TO his own clothes, a man has a world of vanity, quite a bit of it wasted on his girl friends. A man walking out of a hat store, after having purchased a new skimmer, gets the idea that quite a few people he passes study the hat and pronounce it either good, fair or bad. The new hat on the man is shrieking to him that nearly everyone is sizing it up. As a matter of fact, there isn't one woman, for instance, in 10 who right off can tell the color or cut of two out of the many men's hats she sees from day to day.

One of a man's worst experiences is purchasing a new hat. It is not uncommon to hear a customer ask a hat salesman: "Now on the level, does this look awright?" Nearly always the salesman says: "No, it looks terrible and if I were you I'd try some other store."

* * *

MEN have a hard time with hats because most hats are constructed to fit heads with a round aspect, whereas a great many men have heads that are long, heads that come up to a point and heads with bumps on them. A man with a long head will pull a hat right out of shape. A new hat on him will look like last year's number. The hats look nice in the store window, but once the long-headed man puts one on, it starts to curl up and take on fantastic shapes.

* * *

Yes, you've guessed it. I just bought one, holding on to a straw four days after the bell had rung, and giving in only after some of the people began staring at the crazy man who, instead of putting his stray hat away on September 15, elected to wear it as long as the weather seemed as nice as when it was bought in June.

MR. WALLACE AND CHEERING PARROT ALL SET FOR FOOTBALL GAMES

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1929, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 21.

THOUSANDS of football enthusiasts in this section of the country are poring over the local sports pages getting an eyeful slant on current pigskin talent at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles; Stanford University, in Palo Alto, near San Francisco, and the University of California in Berkeley, across the bay from Frisco. Football temperatures always run high, even in the flick colony.

There's Richard Wallace, for examp. Mr. Wallace is a sane mortal even though he directs celluloiders. But Mr. Wallace isn't sane 'atall on this football racket. He's an ardent Trojan (U. S. C.) fan and made himself very popular last year with that team's opposition by sitting in their rooting section and shrieking for the Trojans.

This year, he must have increased his insurance policies, for Richard has evolved a great cheering scheme peculiarly his own. He has trained a parrot to scream: "Tee, Tee, T-R-O-Jay, Jay, D-A-N! Trojan! Trojan!" That being the mighty battle defi of U. S. C. cheerers Richard will go to all the games. He will sit in the opposition section as usual, he and the parrot, and together, they will thunder their war cry.

Viola Dana's Car Struck by Truck

HAVING spent the night with her sister, Shirley Mason, Viola Dana Rose betimes and in due course traipsed to the garage to awaken her motor bus.

"Be careful how you drive," warned Shirley. "It rained last night, and the streets are slippery as glass."

Viola Dana

Vi dutifully promised to watch her throttle, and off she rode. Down Santa Monica boolvard she hummed at a most dignified speed. She stopped for traffic. Directly behind her purred another car. Its driver turned to look at a truck driver. Vi shivered, held on to the wheel, and waited to be smacked to oblivion. Crash-o!

Out jumped the "back-looker." Vi stayed put. Her knees permitted no casualties. Courtesy cards of accidents were exchanged. Vi looked at the injured rear and side of her car and decided it strangely resembled an accordion. But, curiously enough, it remembered how to ambulate, and, amidst rattles and the ridiculous giggles of bystanders, off drove Miss Dana, her chin high and her knees her own business.

Driving a car, these days, has become more of a gamble than Caliente.

Lupe Valez, Gary Romantic Again

SCREENALITIES: Evelyn Brent cables from London that she is having a perfectly scrumptious time. She returns the middle of next month to start work on her second starring flick, with Cleve Brook the hero . . . Lupe Valez and Gary Cooper are at it again. Long distancing each other from hence to whence—whence being Tampa, Fla., where Lupe and the Henry King troupe are locationing for 'bout six weeks . . . Hear tell John Barrymore wears only one suit of clothes through the entire picture of "The Man." That should please John mightily . . . Sam Ornitz, author of "Haunch, Paunch and Jawl," "Yankees Passional," etc., is back in our midst doing his stuff for M. G. M. Sam spent the summer isolated in a 'lil' place in the Adirondacks and admits he wore out two typewriters writing his new noved . . . And that's all.

TWO STAGE DRAMAS HERE

Glenn Hunter will open a week's engagement in the Nixon Monday in the new play, "Reborn." The production was written by Irma Kraft.

"The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" will be presented in the Pitt by the George Sharp Players next week.

Walter Catlett, Broadway comedian, is featured in "Why Leave Home?" a musical movie version of the stage play, "Cradle Snatchers," coming to the Aldine next week.

Dolores Costello and Grant Withers are featured in "Hearts in Exile," current film in the Stanley.

New bills of both stage and screen entertainment open in the Harris and Sheridan Square today. The feature picture in both theaters is "Hurricane," featuring Hobart Bosworth, Leila Hyams and Johnny Mack Brown.

"Fast Company," screen version of Ring Lardner's story, "Elmer the Great," opens in the Enright today. Jack Oakie, Sam Hardy and Evelyn Brent are featured.

"Gold Diggers of Broadway," Warners' latest all-talk, all-color picture, continues as the attraction in the Grand.

"Her Private Life," starring Billie Dove, will open in the Olympic Monday.

"The Hottentot," featuring Edward Everett Horton and Patsy Ruth Miller, is now on a three-day engagement in the Regent.

Woman Crashes Plug, Drives Off

When an unidentified woman drove her automobile into a water plug at Fifth and Murray Hill avenues last night, water spouted 10 feet into the air. According to police, the car was slightly damaged, but the woman drove away without leaving any clue to her identity. The bureau of highways and sewers were notified, and repairs to the broken plug were begun.

Little Theater To Hold Tryouts

Initial tryouts of the drama department of the Little Theater of Pittsburgh will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in Utility Hall in the Philadelphia Company Building. An invitation has been extended to all who are interested in legitimate drama. The play for which tryouts will be held is "La Sombra," written by Helene B. Backus, a Pittsburgh woman. Mrs. Backus will help select the types desired.

New Sheffield Man Held as Wild Driver

AMBRIDGE, Pa., Sept. 21. — Walter J. Reader, New Sheffield, is held on a charge of reckless driving. His wife is recovering at home from painful injuries. Police say Reader ran through the barrier of an unpaved roadway and upset the car.

Estate of $85,000 Given Sister, Nephew

Sees Marines

While the U. S. Marines see the world, Lily Damita sees them in "The Cock Eyed World," the "What Price Glory" film sequel, coming to the Aldine September 30.

WIFE BATTLES DIVORCE SUIT

Pretty Grace Frank is fighting the divorce action of her husband, Joseph Frank, Etna, who accuses her of a friendship with Walter Schuman which she denies.

The contest is being heard by Judge Joseph M. Swearingen, Common Pleas Court, with Edgar R. Ray, detective, as the star witness for the husband. Ray testified that on several occasions he saw Schuman and Mrs. Frank enter a residence separately, where they remained for about two hours.

Ray identified a paper which it was alleged by Ray that Mrs. Frank had signed admitting misconduct on her part. Another detective, W. H. Westlake, also testified as to being with Ray when Mrs. Frank was shadowed.

The Franks were married in 1923 and have one child. The trial of the case started yesterday afternoon and will be continued Monday.

Real Estate

A stone residence at 3705 California avenue, North Side, has been purchased by F. J. Slater from the William Hamilton estate, according to reports in real estate circles. The former Slater home at 3649 California avenue has been purchased by Allegheny County, and the house razed to make way for the new Ohio River boulevard.

A property at the southeast corner of Eighth avenue and Library place, Munhall, has been sold by the Carnegie Land Company to Pearley A. Ullum for $15,000. The lot is 75x119 feet.

The Newell and Schneider Company has sold to John Modispacher a three-story brick store and dwelling on 22x66 feet at 603 Herron avenue.

Herman Kamin, builder, has sold to John H. Homer a six-room house and garage at 920 Deely street, Fifteenth Ward.

Samuel R. Shillman has sold to Miriam S. Weinberg 29x62 feet in Magee street, First Ward.

In Overbrook, Drew Brothers, builders, have sold to Mrs. Bertha Dalessio a six-room house in Wexford avenue, Inglewood Gardens.

A double house at 2531 Plainview avenue, Brookline, has been sold by C. G. Crook to Owen L. Cochran, who deeded in part payment a six-room house at 715 Bellaire avenue.

Mrs. Ora H. Euwer has sold to John C. Conrath 48x151 feet in Giddings avenue, Fifteenth Ward.

Building permit applications included:

Twenty-ninth Ward—J. W. Claus, brick dwelling, 15 Claus avenue, $9,000.

Like thunder beginning
And lightning ending
And hail stinging faces;
Like a black orchid;
Like a blue swan crying;
Like a Prelude by Gershwin.

A FORM OF CRITICISM

BECAUSE Percy Hammond's review on the play "Murder on the Second Floor" was one of the few good ones, the producer, Al Woods, clipped a sugary paragraph from it and advertised it in the Sunday papers recently. Woods, who calls everybody "Hello Sweetheart!" added to the ad: "Thanks very much, sweetheart!—Al Woods."

When the ad copy came to the Herald-Tribune, for which Mr. Hammond is critic, the editor frowned on the "undignified" part and said: "Of all things! He makes Hammond look like a sissy!"

So saying, he switched the line to read: "Thanks very much, Percy!"—which, anyone will tell you, is just as bad.

NIFTY

Leave it to the Broadway crowd to invent slang that tells more in a sentence than the regular language. Frinstance:

"How did Joe Doakes, the new headliner, do at the Palace yesterday?"

"Well, I hate to knock anybody, but the bases were full and he struck out."

IN FEWER WORDS

Judge's best crack of the month: "The movies have gone from bad to words."

OOP!

ROY HARTLEY, the Broadway gossip columnist (see the novel "Broadway Interlude"), was gabbling with Pierre Sidell, of the Sidell Sisters, a "Show Boat" duo of able dancers.

"Yes," yawned the paragrapher, "I always think of all the unkind things I've written about people before I fall asleep."

"Indeed," was the vicious retort, "and how can you do with so little sleep?"

MUSIC HATH CHARMS

Debussy made me crazy
Ravel drove me mad
Beethoven called forth heavy tears
Chopin made me sad.

Tschaikowsky gave me throbbing pulse
Brahms roused the lyric muse
But now my life is Hell indeed
I've got those Gershwin blues!

SENTIMENT

Perhaps the most beautiful sentence is the one under the glass-top desk of a local woman business executive, which reads: "To lose a friend—is to die a little."

IN CASE YOU DIDN'T KNOW

A COLUMN ago it was revealed that You Do Not Have to Accept a Dial Phone.

Readers telephoned demanding that we be more explicit. Well, it happened this way. A famous New York attorney, who just came from a hospital after a long illness, returned to his apartment to discover that the regulation telephone had been replaced by the new dial gag.

He is an old bachelor and invariably alone and is in the convalescent period. Little wonder, then, that he became infuriated (what with his frail condition) to think that if he suffered a stroke or something he would have to grope in the dark and finger the new gadjet trying to summon a physician.

When the phone phirm argued that they were sorry but wouldn't change matters he threatened court action and they immediately surrendered.

HAW!

Izzy Elinson would have you believe he actually overheard it near Forty-second street and the Grandest Canyon:

"Do you think that kid will ever make a name for himself?"

THAT'S JUST TOO BAD!

NEW YORKERS who have to travel via the subway are confronted by window posters which remind them that the Interborough Rapid Transit picks up seven tons of waste paper every day in the year. This, one presumes, is a hint to passengers not to make the tube their refuse can.

The I. R. T., however, does not add that it peddles the waste paper at about $10 per ton.

So—if it sells seven tons of waste paper for 365 days at, let's say, $10 a ton, they sell 2,555 tons a year, no?

Which in subwayese means 511,000 nickels, or in new paper money exactly $25,550 per year.

THE COMEBACK SWELL

Eddie Cantor, the "Whoopee" star, was cornered by a cloak-and-suiter, who had been recommended to "Sweet Adeline," the new and delightful Arthur Hammerstein show.

"Well," said the grumbler, "I saw that show you told me to see, but I was disappointed in that Charlie Butterworth. He's funny, all right, but he doesn't sing and he doesn't dance. He is only a comedian."

"Say,' said the fed-up Cantor, "did you ever hear of a guy named Kreisler? Well, he can't play any other instrument but a fiddle."

SOTTO VOCE

David L. Levy: Rouben Mamoulian directed the "Applause" flicker, I know, and not Monta Bell, whose name is easier to spell, however.

NOVELETTE

THE town recently responded affectionately to a young newcomer whose magic and affable manner embellishes one of the current entertainments. His youth amazes auditors who are awed by his cunning and immensely clever now-you-see-it-and-now-you-don't specialties, and perhaps it won't offend him to report that a veteran prestidigitator (magician to you!) who took a fancy to him, has been teaching him all his startling stunts.

It appears that the graying headliner (who feels that he hasn't too many more years as a drawing card, or might die at any time) is teaching the youngster the tricks so that he may follow in his success—and that if he does, and the old-timer's wife needs any help, financially or otherwise, he is leaving it to the young fellow's honor to take care of her.

CHEMISTS END CONVENTION

A series of conferences today will end the three-day convention of the American Electro-chemical Society in the William Penn Hotel. Yesterday's program was featured by a visit to the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company plant, in East Pittsburgh; the Firth-Sterling Steel Company, of McKeesport; Duquesne Light Company at Colfax and the Edgar Thomson plant of the Carnegie Steel Company, in Braddock, and a banquet in the William Penn last night.

S. M. Kintner, director of the research laboratories at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, told the visitors that the next big step forward in the development of the electrical industry will probably come from the electrochemical field.

At the banquet last night the biennial award that Dr. Edward Acheson, inventor of carborundum, recently established to honor those making notable discoveries in chemistry, electro-metallurgy and electro-thermics was presented to Dr. Acheson by Francis C. Frary, president of the society, and research director of the New Kensington plant of the Aluminum Company of America. The award was in recognition of Dr. Acheson's contributions to invention and research during the past 35 years.

Watson to Command East Liberty Post

SCHOOLS TO GET DRIVE PRIZES

Representatives of city and county schools that won prizes in the annual clean-up, paint-up and plant-up campaign conducted under the direction of the Chamber of Commerce, will be present Friday night in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium when prizes will be awarded. City and county officials, members of the chamber and school authorities, together with many student representatives, will be present.

Chamber officials are hopeful that the Pittsburgh district will win first place in the national campaign, to be decided early next month in Washington where exhibits of participating schools from the 48 states will be displayed and judged.

Langley High School will be awarded first prize, a cup and $75, and South Hills High School is to get the $50 second prize. The Taylor Allderdice High School won third prize of $25. In the county the first prize went for the second consecutive time to Sewickley High School. West Homestead and Sharpsburg won second and third prizes respectively.

CLAREMORE, Okla., Sept. 21.

Of all the airports I have been in, Tulsa leads. In fact, they lead the entire United States with 45 hundred passengers handled last month.

We are putting in a field here in Claremore, but we have to move 15 or 20 blocks of big buildings.

This fellow Vare is going great. About the only thing can keep him out of the Senate is his popularity.

Society Sees Greensburg Hunt Show

JUST as I prophesied, our society folks flocked to Greensburg yesterday, and probably will flock there again today, to see the Westmoreland Hunt horse show. It was cold and windy, but the skies were blue—a foretaste of October, perhaps—and no one who is really a devotee of horses could be kept away from a show by a mere matter of weather.

Engaging Mrs. Donald Scott Rodgers in conversation near his parking space was Richard Beatty Mellon. Mrs. Rodgers, who always rides in the shows, was in riding costume. Attired in an apple green tweed coat and felt hat of the same hue, Mrs. Dorwin J. Donnelly watched the classes of yesterday afternoon from one of the cars parked by the ringside. Seen with her was Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, in a grey silk sports dress and a green tweed coat and grey hat. One of the animated spectators was Mrs. Herbert A. May in a knitted costume of cinnamon brown, with diagonal stripes of green and yellow. Her hat was of brown felt.

During the early part of the afternoon I noticed Richard King Mellon, in riding clothes, chatting with Margaret Standart, of Detroit, who later in the afternoon rode a number of horses from the Rolling Rock Farms.

Seen strolling up and down before the grandstand were Mrs. James McKay and Jane Allderdice and her debutante sister, Nancy, all in riding clothes.

Chatting with friends parked near the ringside were Mrs. Henry Clay Bughman, of Sewickley, in a dark green tweed coat and green felt hat.

Mrs. Niles Trammell, of Chicago, was at the show, too, where she met many of her friends. She wore a three-piece costume with the jacket of navy blue and the skirt of plaid and a black felt hat. Mrs. John W. Stewart and Mrs. John Stewart and Elizabeth Bovard, in riding habit, engaged her in conversation before the afternoon classes began.

Of course, some of Pittsburgh's and Sewickley's youthful riders were there, too. Bertha Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Twing Brooks, and Nancy Lee Byers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Byers, sat in the grandstand until their turn to ride. I also saw small Isabel Patterson in riding clothes. Isabel is the daughter of the Simon T. Pattersons.

Sitting with her mother, Mrs. William Walker, in her box during the afternoon was Mrs. W. G. Stevenson, of Middleburg, Va., formerly of Sewickley, and her piquant young daughter, Jane. Mrs. Stevenson wore a distinctive gown of purple crepe and orchid with a purple felt hat, and her daughter wore a two-piece frock of navy blue silk with gay embroidery and a tam to match. Mrs. Walker was wrapped in a tan tweed coat, and wore a black felt hat. Talking with Mrs. Mortimer Miller and Mrs. Roy A. Hunt was Mrs. A. R. Martin, of Greensburg, in an orchid knitted coat and an orchid hat.

THERE is an important debutante party today down in Sewickley, or rather up on Sewickley Heights. Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., is the hostess and she is giving a tea dance for her granddaughter, Virginia Thaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thaw III, who will make her bow in New York this winter. After the party Mrs. Thaw will give a small dinner for the Pittsburgh debutantes, I understand.

A BIT of news from Sewickley, too, is the announcement that the Sewickley Valley Cot Club has decided to present "They All Want Something," by Courtney Savage, this year. Mrs. James Todd, who is president, has announced that the play will be given on Tuesday evening, October 22, in Guildhall, Sewickley.

Rehearsals already are under way for the production, and in the cast are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Porter, Mrs. Frederick Hufnagle, Jane Edson, William Bradford, Philip Lantz, Gardner Woods and James B. Cullum, Jr.

AN interesting wedding of today is taking place up in Massachusetts, with a Pittsburgh girl as as the bride. This is the marriage of Mary Caldwell Woolfolk, daughter of the Robert Baylor Woolfolks, of Bartlett street, and John Russell Norton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Norton, of Newton, Mass., which will be solemnized at 5 o'clock at the Woolfolk summer home in Jerusalem road, Cohasset, Mass. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Lawrence MacLure, of the Newton Grace Church. The bride will wear a gown of white satin made with a train falling from the waist line, and her tulle veil will be held with orange blossoms. She will carry a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Virginia Woolfolk is going to be her sister's only attendant, wearing eggshell satin with a small hat of dahlia red velvet, and will carry a bouquet of dahlias. Wilmot Kennedy Bell, of New York, is to be the best man, and the ushers will include Leroy Albert Page, Jr., of New York; Benjamin Townsend Fawcett, of Newton; Lewis Covell Copeland, of Northampton, Mass., and Charles Russell Todd, of Ashmont, Mass.

After the ceremony there will be a reception and dinner. Mrs. Woolfolk will wear dark blue velvet and ecrue lace with a hat to match. Mr. and Mrs. Norton will make their home in Westchester Road, Newton, to be there after October 1.

Among the local people who went on for the wedding are Mr. and Mrs. James S. Crutchfield, Catherine Grace and Alice Crutchfield and Albin Crutchfield, of Beaver road, Sewickley; Mr. and Mrs. William Baggs, of this city, and Mrs. George McCague, of Sewickley. Mr. and Mrs. Crutchfield gave the rehearsal dinner last night in the Someset Hotel, Boston.

THE marriage of Miss Louise Emma Gottwals, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Gottwals, of East street, North Side, and W. Lyle Bromby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bromby, of East Farnham, Quebec, Canada, was solemnized Wednesday night in the Second United Presbyterian Church, North Side. The bride wore white chiffon and her tulle veil was held with a cap of pearls, rhinestones and orange blossoms. She carried a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Margaret Rawie was maid of honor, appearing in green chiffon with hat to match, while the bridesmaid, Miss Kathryn McMahon, appeared in coral satin and tulle with hat to correspond. They carried pink roses. George Bromby was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Harry Rawie and John Gottwals. After a trip, Mr. and Mrs. Bromby will be at home in Hodgkiss street, North Side.

THE Travellers' Club is to open its season's activities with a reception and tea in honor of the president, Mrs. J. C. Schreiner, Tuesday, in the Congress of Clubs. Mrs. G. H. Sahlin, chairman of music, will present Mrs. Louise Reams Mathews, Mrs. Frances Schreiner Weber, Miss Sara Jamiscn Logan and Mrs. William L. Stone, who are to give the program, and Mrs. Frank D. Johnston and Mrs. Ross K. Sefton, social and hospitality chairman, will serve tea. This year marks the Travellers' fortieth annual pilgrimage into foreign lands. Having been organized early in 1890, it is one of the oldest womens' organizations in the state. It grew from a reading circle that was formed in the home of Mrs. Andrew Easton in connection with a sewing group, and has bee headed by women prominent in club and civic circles.

During their many years of "travel," most of which has been done on paper, the members have studied every country in the world. In 1892 the club became affiliated with the General Federation of Women's Clubs and in 1895 with the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women. It is also a unit of the Allegheny County Federation. The Travellers have interested themselves in local civic affairs, aiding in every emergency, and taking a special interest at all times in the work for the blind.

Musicians Demand Pay on 'Dark Weeks'

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Officers of the Musicians' Protective Association and representatives of the Shubert Theater interests will meet here Monday in an effort to adjust differences which theraten to keep Philadelphia theaters dark or without orchestras. Motion picture houses are not affected by the controversy. Musicians and theater managers are deadlocked over the question of payment for music for "dark" weeks, when the theaters are closed for lack of attractions or through booking exigencies.

Cousins in Tie For Rich Tax Office

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 21.—A tie vote resulted in the Republican nomination of tax collector in Dunkard Township. Levi and Roy Titus, cousins, received 40 votes each. Mrs. Minnie Burnser won the Democratic nomination. Fifteen candidates, all running on both tickets, were in the race for the position which pays approximately $5,000 a year. Large coal holdings in the township swell the tax collector's income.

A representative from the State Highway Department will lead the discussions. D. J. Driscoll, of St. Marys, and John M. Flynn, of Ridgway will be among the speakers.

Boroughs Combine To Fight Plant Dust

Councils of three boroughs at a meeting in Bellevue borough hall last night decided to combine their efforts toward elimination of alleged nuisances caused by the operation of the Davison Coke and Iron Company and the Green Bag Cement Company plants on Neville Island, opposite Avalon. They represented the boroughs of Bellevue, Avalon and Ben Avon.

Residents of the boroughs complained that dust, dirt and noise from the plants violates an agreement made by company officials with the boroughs more than a year ago.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

MASTEN SERVES TRADERS 38 YEARS

Founder of Local Firm Started in Business as His Own Wire Operator

For more than 38 years an important part in Pittsburgh's financial history has been played by A. E. Masten & Co. For a short time after the brokerage business was founded A. E. Masten was his own telegraph operator and bookkeeper. The office was then in the Bank of Commerce Building which is now known as the Grogan Building.

About 1896 the firm moved to the ground floor of a three-story brick building located at the corner of Fourth avenue and Wood street and remained there until it was compelled to move, as the building was to be torn down to make way for the Arrott Building. Across the street was the Tradesmen's National Bank and later on the Columbia Bank. Few tall buildings were then on Fourth avenue. The Vandergrift and Times Building, now the Magee Building, were notable ones.

The firm then moved to the ground floor of the Dallmeyer Building, 316 Fourth avenue, which in a short time was torn down to make way for the present Commonwealth Trust Company. Since the firm had had ground floor offices for quite a number of years, it was with no little thought as well as trepidation that 28 years ago they selected the second floor of the Vandergrift Building, 323 Fourth avenue, then chiefly occupied by the Standard Oil Company, with the Pittsburgh Trust Company located on the ground floor.

The "old timers" are the only ones possessed of the memory to recall the changes that have taken place in the past 25 or 30 years in that narrow street called the "Wall Street of Pittsburgh." The then small buildings nevertheless were tenanted with men of great enterprise and wealth, and they later erected great buildings in the short distance between Smithfield and Market streets that now splendidly attest their faith in the future of their city.

COPPER STOCKS

In the early years of 1900, some prominent citizens of this community became extensively interested in the development of copper. The Boston Stock Exchange was the center of copper securities and its members maintained private wire connections with copper regions in Michigan and Arizona. A. E. Masten & Co. were the only members of that exchange in this city, and they still retain their membership in that exchange; also in the New York and Pittsburgh stock exchanges, the New York Curb and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Pittsburgh profited immensely by the fortunes that came through the success that its citizens developed in the copper industry. The firm of A. E. Masten & Co. gained a countrywide reputation through its ability to give service through its correspondents to all of the centers interested in the copper industry. The firm has always expressed a pride in paying tribute to their correspondents who were pioneers in supplying private wires and, having grown up together for more than 30 years, have retained these private wire connections that now enable them to serve their clients in all of the principal markets of the United States and Canada.

NAME UNCHANGED

There has been no change of name and the firm, being actively managed and operated by immediate relatives with the help of a number of capable employes that have been with them many years, redounds to their credit. They are most willing to express their appreciation of the vitally constructive changes in recent years that made the business one of comfort and safety both to them and their clients as well as to the whole mass of security buyers. These changes are pre-eminently due to the strict supervision of the New York Stock Exchange of its members and the better regulation of our banking system.

The exaltation of the word "service" today gives the broker much comfort because he knows that he is entitled to a high position in its category. In fact, one who states that there is no business in the world that exacts as high a standard of ethics as does the Stock Exchange of its members, need have small worry of his statement being controverted.

STOCK DISTRIBUTION

The Pittsburgh community is known throughout the world for what it has done in industrial lines. The companies that have accomplished these things have done so through the issuance of securities in the distribution of which brokers have been a prime factor.

Just recently A. E. Masten & Co. expressed its faith in our community's progress and future destiny by opening another Pittsburgh office on the second floor of the Koppers Building, where as complete facilities are afforded those interested in securities as those that prevail in the Vandergrift Building at 323 Fourth avenue. The Koppers Building office has direct private wires to New York. Investment and information departments are complete. They afford all the facilities now asked for by the discriminating and intelligent person interested in securities.

The investment department came as a consequence of the rapid changes in public demands in the past few years for participation in new offerings of securities. But in adding this department, the firm has not departed from its long-established reputation as a strictly commission house. It does not underwrite or promote new enterprises.

This firm has never adhered to the idea that the heads of its organization are the lone contributors to its success but are most willing to recognize the loyalty and efficiency of the employes as being a very substantial factor. Many of them have served from 15 to 34 years and most of the firm's partners came up from lowly positions and served their apprenticeship in every department of the brokerage business.

The partners are all active in the business. Their main office is in charge of members of the firm, Fred C. Masten and W. J. Fleming. Their Koppers Building office is in charge of William S. Masten, a son of the firm's founder, A. E. Masten, and a manager, James Flower. Their well equipped Butler (Pa.) branch is managed by R. E. Garber. In Wheeling, W. Va., they have maintained a branch office for about 25 years, which is under the management of Louis F. Brand, a resident partner. Long ago they recognized the enterprise of the Wheeling community and opened this office. Their faith in the whole state of West Virginia is shown in having maintained private wire connections with correspondents in several of its cities. They also maintain the same service in Southwestern Ohio and Pennsylvania.

TRADE BETTER, SAYS DUN REVIEW

Cooler Weather Increases Sale of Clothes—Coal Shows Some Improvement

A moderate improvement in general business conditions is noted, with retail sales of wearing apparel being stimulated to some extent by cooler weather, although jobbers report demand as yet comparatively light, R. G. Dun & Co. say in their weekly review of business conditions in the Pittsburgh district.

There is a slight improvement in sales of jobbers of shoes and men's wear, while sales of millinery are fairly good. Building construction is considerably lower than last year, and demand for lumber and building material is not very active. There is some improvement in the demand for jewelry, sales as a whole averaging somewhat ahead of last year. The grocery and provision trade continues rather quiet.

MILL OPERATIONS

Industrial operations continue to maintain a very fair average, although steel mills are not operating at as high a rate as they were sometime ago, unfilled orders having fallen off somewhat. The demand for radio equipment is good, and manufacturers of electrical and radio equipment are operating at a very fair rate.

Production of window glass continues at close to capacity, with the demand holding up in a satisfactory manner. There is a moderate improvement in demand for window glass but production is still below normal for this time of the year. The production of crude oil showed a decided increase last week and was not far from the record high.

COAL IMPROVED

Bituminous coal is being produced at a somewhat higher rate with a slightly better demand for domestic users. Industrial sources continue to buy sparingly. Prices show little change, with Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal quoted as follows, per net ton at the mines: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1.00 to $1.10.

Collections continue to average slow with jobbers.

ALLEGHENY COUNTY
'Public Improvements Promote Progress'
Convinced of the fact that public improvements exert an important influence upon the private, corporate and civic progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.
SAW MILL RUN BOULEVARD, now under construction, follows the valley lying immediately beyond Mount Washington and extends from Overbrook Borough to the West End, with a branch leading to Knoxville. The Boulevard passes the south portal of the Liberty Tunnel, and will make this important approach to Pittsburgh's Business Triangle conveniently available to thousands of people at present not served by the Tunnel. The estimated cost of the Saw Mill Run Boulevard is $1,162,000; it will be completed in its entirety in the Fall of 1930.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

ADULTS TAUGHT AT SCHOOL HERE

Pittsburgh Academy Has Students of 35 States And Nine Countries

Pittsburgh has the only school in the United States that specializes in giving academic and business education purely to adult students. Since 1882, when the Pittsburgh Academy was founded by J. Warren Lytle, it has shown consistent growth and has specialized in giving instruction to students who are finishing their education later in life.

In 1882 when the school was organized there was an enrollment of 20 students and a faculty of four instructors. The annual enrollment is now more than 1,400 students with a proportionately large faculty. Students come from all parts of the world. Last year 35 states were represented in the student body, as were also England, Ireland, Canada, Scotland, Italy, Germany, Russia, Greece and Rumania.

More than 13,000 men and women have been educated in this academy, and today are leaders in the business and professional world.

The first home of the Pittsburgh Academy was in a building known as Neville Hall, located at Fourth and Liberty avenues. That the academy filled a definite need in the life of the growing industrial center was evidenced by the steady and marked increase in the enrollment of the student body. In 1896 Neville Hall was unable to accommodate the students that sought admission and more spacious quarters became necessary. The buildings formerly occupied by the University of Pittsburgh, then known as the Western University of Pennsylvania, were secured and occupied until 1909, when this ground was taken for the new City-County Building. The new and more centrally located May Building then became the home of the Pittsburgh Academy.

IDEAL LOCATION

Here a period of growth and expansion began which in 1915 necessitated the securing of larger quarters to accommodate the constantly increasing student body. An ideal location was then selected in downtown Pittsburgh at 531 Wood street. The building was entirely remodeled to suit the needs of the school. The fourth, fifth and sixth floors were divided into large rooms most convenient to the various departments. With perfect lighting, ventilation, private entrance, two elevators and quietness and refinement of location, the academy has secured a privacy and a place where the students may most efficiently and agreeably do their work.

The aim of the academic department is to give the students a general development such as will enable them to cope successfully even with the unforeseen emergencies of life. In addition, students are trained for direct college entrance. The object is to qualify students at maturity for college in a short space of time consistent with the thorough mastery of their subjects for college. Students in this department can complete a full four-year course in two years.

BUSINESS COURSES

The aim of the business department is to fit students for commercial life—to make them active, self-reliant, trustworthy and efficient. A wide variety of courses is offered and in each course special attention is given to the demands of business today, so that the graduates enter business not as novices, but as trained men and women, alive to the conditions peculiar to modern business and capable of adjusting themselves to these conditions and of rendering efficient service.

The Pittsburgh Academy enrollment includes students ranging in age from 16 to 65. In the general educational department the average age is 35. Many of the students in this department are in their early twenties, showing the elementary school subjects before beginning a college preparatory or business course.

Among the others are men and women who have attained responsible positions in business and have found their lack of formal education a serious handicap.

GRADUATING CLASSES

In the academic department each year the graduating class includes men and women over 35 years of age. These ambitious people enter college and are prepared for professional life.

The graduating classes from the commercial department offer the same testimony concerning the ability of men and women above what many consider the school age. In 1928 there were 37 persons over 26 years of age who completed business courses.

A graduate of a liberal college, Boston, he has been such a practical idealist that his speedy rise to the presidency was not entirely unexpected.

He was formerly an instructor in the Boston public school system. He is a student and teacher of psychological methods, and an emphatic believer of co-operation between educational institutions.

Mr. Grady's desire to keep the institution which he directs fully up to the pace of business developments is evidenced by the steady addition of entirely new courses and the development of all departments in step with the changes of commercial life.

In commenting on the aims of the Pittsburgh Academy, Mr. Grady says:

"Business training must constantly be adapted to the needs and developments of business organizations. The students during the period of training must be made familiar with the conditions under which they will work later as employes. Experience will round-out and supplement the training received at school, but the graduate of a school of business, beginning his career, should be qualified to fill his niche acceptably, and to do a satisfactory day's work from the very beginning. The school is the connecting link between the business and those who desire to enter business, and also, those who are engaged in business, but who need specialized training to obtain advancement. The school should interpret the requirements of business, and should guide its students to meet these requirements."

ADVERTISING

The widespread interest in the growth in the knowledge of advertising has resulted in rapid expansion of this department of the Pittsburgh Academy. In February a department of advertising typography was started. More recently a course in advertising layout and type design has been opened under the direction of Edwin H. Stuart, president of the Edwin H. Stuart Typographic Service, Inc.

Mr. Stuart is the author of several volumes dealing with advertising and typography. In his work as head of the department of advertising and typography, he is being assisted by George Kinnard, superintendent of the Stuart service, who will also be the instructor of a course in advanced typography.

The Pittsburgh Academy is fully accredited by the Pennsylvania State Department of Education.

Among the courses in which the greatest interest has been shown by students are commercial law, business letter writing, psychology, public speaking, salesmanship and stenotypy.

PLANT MANAGER PROMOTED

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept. 21.—R. R. Stevenson, general superintendent of New Kensington, Arnold and Logans Ferry works of the United States Aluminum Company, has been transferred to Pittsburgh as assistant to Col. R. L. Streeter, vice president, and will be succeeded here by Ralph M. Ferry, general superintendent of Edgewater (N. J.) plant, it was announced today.

Stevenson will have charge of operations. He has been connected with that firm here for the past 20 years, serving in various capacities.

Ferry served about 15 years ago in the local plant, coming here as mechanical engineer. He was sent to Toronto, Canada, and then to Edgewater.

W. C. Winter, assistant superintendent of the New Kensington plant, will succeed Ferry in Edgewater. Winter has been here 10 years.

H. H. Beatty, executive assistant to Vice President Streeter, in Pittsburgh, has been transferred here as superintendent of the Arnold plant.

Prosperity Cuts Reserve Bank Loans

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Weekly Federal Reserve statements gave further evidence of the tremendous accumulation of wealth resulting from national prosperity.

Although brokers loans are more than $2,000,000,000 higher than a year ago, member bank borrowings at the Federal Reserve are now $160,000,000 less than at this time last year and the amount of Federal Reserve credit in use shows a decrease of $193,000,000.

This testimony to the manner in which the creation of fresh resources is offsetting the increase in brokers loans caused the further jump of $95,000,000 in collateral borrowings last week to be ignored and stocks went ahead with their highly selective advance in the early dealings.

STEEL VOLUME LOSES MORE GROUND

Possibility That Fourth Quarter May Drop Under 1928 Seen From Trend

By B. E. V. LUTY

The slipping of steel referred to a week ago has become more pronounced. Possibly some mills can show an increase in bookings, but the general showing is clear that, while buying was distinctly light in August, there is no increase this month. It is normal for there to be a substantial seasonal increase and such an increase is necessary to sustain production.

After reaching an all-time peak rate in May, steel production began to decline. At first the decreases were so small that they could not be distinctly observed week by week, but were brought out by the official monthly reports of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingot production. August showed a rate 6.7 per cent under May. The rate in the past week may be estimated at between 12 and 15 per cent under May, there having been a sharper decrease in the last fortnight. The present rate is scarcely above that of last September and as October, 1928, increased over September, the industry is now on the verge of having a lower rate than a year previous.

There are decided chances that production in the fourth quarter of this year will be distinctly under production in the fourth quarter of last year, making a sharp contrast with the fact that in the first eight months of this year there was an 18 per cent increase over last year. The divergence is due to a double swing, increasing production in the late months of last year and decreasing production now.

ACTIVE FOR YEAR

If the trade were disposed to take a philosophic or long range view, it would be more or less contented with the present position and outlook, but the habit is to take the last record as standard. As a matter of plain fact, observed in the activity of various steel consuming lines, such as automobile manufacture and the laying of natural gas pipe lines, and observed likewise in the steel production statistics, there has been an extra and special volume of activity since just about the middle of last year.

It is true that general trade or industrial conditions have been particularly good since that time, but a comparison of steel production and general industrial production as the latter is reported by the Federal Reserve Board shows that steel has been running distinctly above its former relation to general activity. No revolution occurred in the character of activity that would place steel permanently at this higher relation. It is idle, in that connection, to talk of steel going into new uses. It did not begin that on July 1, 1928. It began when the first ton of steel was made and has continued ever since.

DEMAND LIGHTER

Part or all of this extra bulge in steel demand is now coming off. There is no visible prospect of steel production going below its general average with proper allowance for annual increase, but production in the first eight months of this year was at a rate 25 per cent above production in the calendar year 1926. That was a very good year and increases at the rate of 25 per cent every three years are totally out of the question.

Automobile production is making a poorer showing than was expected. In the last five years second half production has been one-sixth under first half production. If there is a decrease of one-third this year instead of one-sixth it will make this half year just equal to the second half of last year, and not much more than that is expected. July and August showed slightly more than the average seasonal decrease, Ford production having increased, but now Ford is forecast for 175,000 cars this month against 205,000 in August.

FABRICATORS GAIN

With declining steel consumption in some directions, and sustained conumption in other quarters, fabricated structural steel makes an outstanding showing of an increase. The official report on the structural fabricating shops, just issued by the Department of Commerce, shows August to have been at a record high for all time for both bookings, at 365,750 tons, and shipments at 338,800 net tons.

Shipments in eight months gained 18 per cent over shipments a year previous, which is precisely the increase there was in total steel ingot production. These reports are of special value as indicators for the future. Reports for various other industries show merely what has been done, while these reports show that in every one of the last seven months bookings exceeded shipments, by an aggregate of 300,300 tons, or about a month's work. Thus heavy demands upon the steel mills are assured for the future. Fabricating shop shipments in eight months represented about 8 per cent of all steel produced, and there is other steel required in the construction work involved.

Finished steel prices have been holding, but are being watched closely by both sellers and buyers.

Columbia Gas Hits New High Record

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Columbia Gas displayed noteworthy strength on the stock exchange this morning, running up 5 points to 122, a new record high.

Improvement Reported By Pittsburgh Steel

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE Pittsburgh Steel Company spent $2,603,773 on plant improvements in the year ended June 30, 1929. This brings the total for the past three years up to $5,722,263. By the end of the present month further additions to plants will have been completed representing expenditures of close to $1,000,000.

The improvements made during the past few years are resulting in substantial savings in production costs. Many of these will be particularly apparent in the future.

The additional facilities included new steam and power plants, an extension of the Pilger mill building and the partial electrification of mills. The recent capital expenditures were in addition to the building of a large Pilger mill for the production of seamless steel tubing several years ago.

Earnings Gain

THE annual report shows that profits for the fiscal year, after all charges, were $4,535,437, or $15 a share on the 253,500 shares of common stock after deducting dividends on the $10,475,000 of 7 per cent preferred stock.

Adjustments made in the course of the final audit resulted in profits slightly higher than those shown in the company's preliminary statements which placed net for the year at $4,499,480 or $14.85 a share.

The common stock has been on a $4 annual basis since the beginning of this year so that the company is putting nearly $3 back into surplus for every dollar paid in dividends.

Previous Years

THE extent to which Pittsburgh Steel has benefited by the general gains in the steel business and by improvements in its operating facilities is evident from a comparison of the year just reported with previous fiscal years. Net profit of $4,535,437 for the year ended June 30, 1929, compared with $1,342,141 in the 1928 year; with $1,951,958 in 1927 and with $2,533,578 in 1926. The last year was the best since the present organization was formed by a merger of the Pittsburgh Steel Company and the Pittsburgh Steel Products Company.

Naturally, the improvement in earnings has been reflected in the current financial position. The final audit showed that current assets amounted to $22,095,341 against current liabilities of only $3,773,779. Cash amounted to $4,413,642 and marketable securities totaled $2,644,671.

Other Liquid Items

SEVERAL liquid items were not included in the current assets. Cash held by the trustee for the improvement account totaling $979,322 was among these. This was the remainder of a sum of $2,100,000 set aside when the company's debenture 6s were sold. Within a short time this entire fund will have been used.

Marketable securities valued at $399,386, held as an investment reserve against future furnace relining, and insurance reserves also were not included among the current assets.

Plant Account

IN ADDITION to spending $3,103,127 for maintenance and repairs during the year, the company made very liberal charges for depreciation. A reserve of $1,629,508 was deducted from the year's profits. This was in addition to depletion of $162,241.

At the end of the year a total depreciation reserve of $16,507,652 had been set up against physical properties valued at $55,596,330. Total reserves amounted to $18,383,657.

Funded Debt Small

FOR a steel company, the funded debt is exceptionally conservative. During the year $777,000 of the debenture 6s were either redeemed or purchased by the treasury. This left only $10,223,000 of funded debt outstanding.

The surplus accounted was very substantially expanded from earnings. On June 30 this figure amounted to $12,829,781, an increase of $2,902,212 for the year.

Retail Food Prices Increase in Month

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The retail food index issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the United States Department of Labor shows for August 15, 1929, an increase of a little more than 1 per cent since July 15, 1929; an increase of about 3¾ per cent since August 15, 1928; and an increase of approximately 59 per cent since August 15, 1913. The index number (1913=100.0) was 154.2 in August, 1928; 158.5 in July, 1929; and 160.2 in August, 1929.

Executive Returns From Convention

W. J. Howells, local manager of Wise Shoe, Inc., 235 Fifth avenue, has just returned from New York, where he attended the Wise fashion convention at the Hotel McAlpin. The sole purpose of the convention was to familiarize the managers with the ensemble of the new fall colors and leathers. Authoritative experts discussed the color and fashion trends.

BUILDING VALUE HOLDS FIRM

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—McGraw-Hill Construction Daily reports that the money value of proposed heavy construction work during the past week revealed that operations were holding steady. The week's total was $64,861,000, a gain of about $4,500,000 over the corresponding week of 1928 and approximately $100,000 above the total for the previous week.

Totals for the week by groups were:

Commercial buildings, $8,510,000; apartment houses and hotels, $16,545,000; public works, $12,861,000; educational buildings, $4,305,000; industrial plants, $10,350,000; hospitals, $6,650,000; railway improvement, $1,125,000; unclassified, $4,515,000.

Hartman Co. Plans Exchange of Stock

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Martin L. Straus, president of Hartman Corporation: "It is believed that Montgomery & Co. will bring to the Hartman organization vast benefits that will result in quicker realization of the underlying values in the Hartman Corporation, than if the latter continued an independent unit. Included in these benefits are greater diversification of merchandising, greater buying power and large financial resources.

Air Line to Join Los Angeles And Denver

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—Western Air Express announces a new schedule to connect Los Angeles and Denver over Western Air Express lines from Los Angeles to Albuquerque and thence to Denver by Mid-Continent Air Express.

Mid-Continent Air Express will connect Denver with Kansas City via Dodge City and Topeka. Other terminals of the new company will be Colorado Springs, Pueblo and El Paso.

TANK OIL PRICE INCREASED

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—For the purpose of better stabilizing its wholesale price to dealers, Standard Oil Company of New Jersey announces an advance of two cents a gallon in posted tank-wagon price of gasoline, effective next Monday.

At the same time it announced that a discount of two cents a gallon from the new posted tank-wagon price would be granted to dealers. In other words, the new tank-wagon price to be made September 23 effects no actual increase in wholesale price to dealers. Retail prices at the company's service stations remain unchanged.

Crafton Man Joins Strip Steel Concern

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Sept. 21.—C. A. Ingals, of Crafton, Pa., formerly associated with the Pittsburgh Coal Company, has been made general sales manager of the Blair Strip Steel Company, of this city.

HOTEL MERGER PLANNED

Proposed acquisition of capital stocks of 12 hotels in the United States and Canada by a new company, United International Hotels, Inc., was announced in a plan of unification sent to stockholders. Dillon, Read & Co. are to be associated with new company as bankers.

In addition to the stocks of these companies, United International Hotels, Inc., will have management contracts with and options to purchase substantial stock interests of 10 additional hotels. This group of properties, to be managed by the United International Hotels, Inc., will have 10,351 rooms and in 1928 did a gross business of approximately $28,000,000.

Capitalization of United International Hotels, Inc., will consist of $2,800,000 principal amount of 6½ per cent sinking fund debentures, all of which will be issued, and 2,000,000 shares of no par value common stock, of which 828,842½ shares will be outstanding.

Hotels included in the plan and forming a nucleus for a larger development will be The Roosevelt, New York City; Mount Royal, Montreal, Quebec; Royal Connaugh, Hamilton, Ont.; the Clifton, Niagara Falls, Ont.; the King Edward, Toronto, Ont.; the Seneca, Rochester; the Onondaga, Syracuse; the Niagara, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; the Lawrence, Erie, Pa.; the Penn-Harris, Harrisburg, Pa.; the Robert Treat, Newark, N. J.; the Portage, Akron, O.

STOCKS SWING HIGHER AFTER DECLINE

Resumption of Activity By Pools Changes Trend Of Market; Solvents Up

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Stock prices drifted irregularly lower at the opening of today's market.

Initial declines of a point or so were recorded by Anaconda, Simmons, Republic Steel and Union Carbide. Sterling Securities opened with a block of 5,000 shares at 36½, up 1, and a new high record. General American Tank and Mathieson Alkali each advanced about a point.

Resumption of pool operations in a wide assortment of public utilities, chemicals and specialties swung the speculative pendulum to the side of rising prices before the end of the first hour. Soft spots continued to crop out here and there, but apparently little attention was paid to them.

Commercial Solvents, which soared 30 points yesterday and then broke 25, jumped 23 points soon after the opening. Allied Chemical moved up 6 and Frank G. Shattuck, Sterling Securities, May Department Stores, Montgomery-Ward, Sears Roebuck, Eastman Kodak, Trico Products and Burroughs Adding Machine sold 2 to 4 points higher. Foster Wheeler preferred ran up 22 to a new high at 230.

American and Foreign Power and Columbia Gas and Electric each moved into new high ground. North American Company ran up more than 3 points, but Standard Gas and Electric and International Telephone were heavy.

Philippines Plan Sugar Output Cut

MANILA, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The convention of the Philippine Sugar Association have unanimously adopted a resolution favoring curtailment of new sugar production in the island. Gov. Gen. Dwight F. Davis and other speakers had argued that an undue increase in Philippine sugar production should be discouraged in order to convince United States producers that the islands' sugar output did not menace American interests. Speakers referred to unsuccessful movements in Congress to tax importations of Philippine sugar and other products.

Guaranty Trust Co. Stock Split Seen

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A split-up of Guaranty Trust Company stock is under discussion, according to interests close to the company. In some quarters, it is said the stock will be split ten-for-one.

Guaranty Trust stock has been strong and is one of the features in today's market, selling at $11,500, a new high, up 100 points in two days.

There are also reports that this bank will shortly figure in an important merger.

Gas Company Binds 20-Year Contract

The Indiana Consumers Gas & By-Products Co. has closed two 20-year contracts to supply gas at wholesale from the company's plant at Terre Haute, Ind., through long distance lines to the Central Illinois Public Service Company, and the Interstate Public Service Company, both of which are controlled by the Insull interests of Chicago.

Flexible Tariff Rates to Be Modified

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Senator Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, admitted on the floor of the Senate today that a tentative agreement had been reached by Republican regulars to modify the flexible provision of the tariff to conform to the present law.

This would strike out entirely the innovation in the House bill which is retained in the Senate committees bill, whereby the President would have the power to raise or lower rates up to the 50 per cent margin on the basis of competitive conditions and allow the President to only take into consideration differences in cost of production in raising or lowering rates.

Loew's Stock Sale Validity Questioned

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—A suit to test the validity of the sale of stock of Loew's, Inc., to Fox theatrical interests is contemplated by Edwin M. Stanton, holder of 300 shares of Loew's stock. This was revealed through a motion made before Supreme Court Justice Sherman to examine witnesses preliminary to filing complaint.

Allis Chalmers Co. To Split Capital

WILMINGTON, Sept. 21.—Stockholders of the Allis Chalmers Manufacturing Company approved proposed to change the authorized common stock from 500,000 shares of $100 par to 2,000,000 of no par and to issue four shares of new common in exchange for each old share.

Oil City Runs.

Metal Market.

P. & G. Plans Drive For Foreign Trade

Entry of the Procter & Gamble Co. of Cincinnati, soap manufacturers and distributors, into the European field was reported today. It was said that the company was negotiating a closer working agreement with the N. V. Margarine unit of Holland and its subsidiary, the Margarine Union, Ltd., of Great Britain. It also was reported that the company is negotiating for acquisition of the Lever Brothers Company, American subsidiary of the large English soap company of that name.

Sir Henri Unaware Of Stewart's Route

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Sir Henri Deterding, managing director of the Royal Dutch-Shell group, has cabled his associates in New York that he has no information of the movements of Col. Robert W. Stewart, former head of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, who was reported en route to London to confer with Sir Henri on a proposed world oil combine to compete with the Rockefeller interests, particularly the Standard Company of New Jersey.

Western Public and Lone Star Buying Continues; Rustless Iron Is Active

Week-end dealings on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange were concentrated on the issues which have been leading the market for the past several days.

Lone Star Gas and Western Public Service continued to reflect the demand which lifted the price of both issues in yesterday's market. On the opening at 63½, Lone Star was unchanged, but buying orders in the market quickly forced it up to the 65 level at which most of the trading yesterday was recorded. Western Public's first price of 42¼ was slightly above the previous close, and another point was added before the end of the first hour.

International Rustless Iron was again the leader of the unlisted section. The stock opened firm around 7, but met a little selling and sagged fractionally from the initial quotation. Traders favoring the stock are insistent that the current recession is due entirely to profit-taking attracted by the recent run-up, which carried the price to $9. Interests in touch with the company's affairs say that important negotiations are in progress and definite news will be forthcoming shortly. Rumors that the deal under negotiation had fallen through were declared groundless.

Big Banker to Become S. E. Broker

By B. C. FORBES

PROFITS made by live stock exchange firms have been so alluring that a banker who has been president of one of New York's leading national banks is to give up banking to become a senior partner in a very well-known stock exchange firm. The chances all are that his income will be several times what his salary has been as bank president.

I know one outstanding New York bank head who refused a partnership in a Wall Street investment firm notwithstanding that he was guaranteed a minimum annual income of a $1,000,000 a year. Events have proved that this banker would have been a "bargain" at several million dollars a year.

W. C. DURANT, reputedly the foremost figure throughout the Coolidge bull market, has been less in the limelight of late. Apparently Durant Motors, the stock which he personally promoted, has not been favored by his bullish operations. It is today down more than 50 per cent from its best price of the year—it was under $10 a share yesterday. Admittedly, however, Durant's motor manufacturing activities are now handled by capable men, whose earnings will depend mainly upon the results they prove able to achieve. These men express confidence that they will make something of the company.

After all that has happened to Durant Motors, stockholders are very much from Missouri.

HENRY L. DOHERTY, after his long indisposition, is very actively back on the job, and I understand that he has near maturity certain projects of a magnitude greater than any this country has ever known along similar lines. The shares of Cities Service, chief of Mr. Doherty's scores of companies, have been steadily creeping upwards on steadily improving earnings. After his newsboy stage, Doherty's early experiences as a youth were in a gas plant, and it is in the gas field, where he has already done his big things, that he plans much bigger things.

Mr. Doherty has been fortunate in "discovering" a young brainy giant, W. Alton Jones, whom he has trained to run things on the spot—Mr. Doherty never believed in spending his days at a desk; and he still continues this method of working away from his office.

WALL STREET is as fickle as Fifth avenue in the matter of fashions. One season bonds will be the vogue. Next season it may be railway shares, the next season industrials, the next utilities. Investment trusts are all the rage today.

The latest illustration of their popularity is the phenomenal scramble for the Lehman Brothers offering. Issued at $104, they have shot up within a few days to above $136. A few days prevviously, when $37,500,000 stock of Chemical National Associates, the new investment trust adjunct of the Chemical bank, was offered, subscriptions approximated $150,000,000, and the price promptly soared.

The right kind of investment trusts, capably managed, possesses genuine advantages. But all of the 500 which have been brought out at a feverish rate have not been of the right kind or enjoying capable management. Some day many fingers will be burned. And then some other type of security will come into fashion.

Incidentally, in the recent column on investment trusts, our table showed British type investors' stock as having declined since the end of July. But it should have bene explained that since then the stock was split up two-for-one. Therefore, the old stock is selling at the equivalent of a very notable advance.

CHARLES E. MITCHELL told the writer long ago that his ambition was to make the National City Bank a bank for the many, catering just as zealously to small savers and small businesses as to big corporations. By inaugurating interest-paying thrift accounts he attracted many thousands of new patrons.

His acquisition of the Corn Exchange Bank, with its 66 branches in New York, a larger number than operated by any other bank, is exactly in line with Mitchell's policy formulated long ago. The wonder is that the Corn Exchange was not captured before now by Mitchell or Al Wiggin or A. P. Giannini or other go-getting bank leaders.

Mitchell's latest coup will lead to the United States having the largest banking institution in the world.

GEORGE M. VERITY announces, with justifiable pride, that an American rolling mill company plant has operated 1,158,000 man-hours without a single lost-time accident, a new world's record for a steel plant. Will other employers please take notice? Accidents still constitute a blot on America's industrial record.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 4 points. There was some buying on relatively steady Liverpool cables, but this was supplied by selling on a favorable view of the weather map, while southern hedging appeared to be absorbed by a moderate trade demand. As a result the early fluctuations were comparatively narrow with the price of December contracts ranging from 18.78c up to 18.83c, and with the general market ruling about net unchanged to 4 points lower at the end of the first hour.

Liverpool cables said that hedging had been offset by trade calling and continental buying in the market there.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 21.—Cotton: spot quiet; prices steady; American strict good middling, 11.11d; good middling, 10.71d; strict middling, 10.51d; middling, 10.31d; strict low middling, 10.16d; low middling 9.91 d; strict good ordinary, 9.51d; good ordinary, 9.11d. Sales, 4,000 bales, including 2,000 American. Receipts, 6,000 bales, American nil. Futures closed quiet and steady; October, 9.94d; December, 9.97d; January, 9.97d; March, 10.05d; May, 10.09d; July, 10.07d.

Schulte Stores Net Declines Sharply

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Schulte Retail Stores Corporation reports for six months to June 30, net income of $1,751,947 after charges but before federal taxes, equal after preferred dividends to $1.21 a share on 1,133,058 common, versus $2,607,375 or $1.97 on same common share basis in 1928 period.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Trading was slow and light in the short session of the bond market. Convertibles made some sharp breaks, International Telephone 4½s losing 4 points in the early dealings, while American Telephone 4½s dropped more than 2. American I. G. Chemical 5½s were off to 113, a low for the current movement, and American International 5½s, a strong feature yesterday, declined about a point.

Changes in the more seasoned sections of the list were narrow.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

Nature's Secret Scent

SCENT-MAKING experts are baffled by the aroma of the "Portadown Fragrance," the new prize-winning rose from Ulster. It is like perfume of an old cottage garden, but one authority considers it a blend of verbena and tea rose.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Lovers—and Others

A WOMAN is always making up her mind to go on a diet, just as a man is always making up his mind to get married—SOME day.

* * *

"When lovely woman stoops to folly,
    And finds too late that men betray,"
She takes her little automatic,
    And "gets her man"—another way.

Old-fashioned maidens drooped with sorrow
    And drenched in tears, their grief and shame,
But, now, Don Juans escape less lightly.
    Don't trifle with a modern dame!

Alas, you spend half your life learning that there isn't any Santa Claus—and the other half wishing that you had all your foolish young illusions back.

HELEN ROWLAND

A man just loves to "admit that he's weak," and then defy a brave, strong, chivalrous woman to save him from temptation.

Somehow, the romantic glamour that was Lindbergh's is already beginning to be dimmed a little by the fact that he is just a happily married man.

When getting a kiss from a girl was a sporting proposition instead of a sure thing, men didn't spend so much time chasing golfballs and betting on the stock market in order to get a little kick out of life.

A small boy never thinks he's bad enough to eat, a man never think's he's bad enough to drink, and a woman never thinks she has enough love, until they've had too much.

Many a woman comes home from a picture show all thrilled and excited about a screen "hero," that she wouldn't be able to endure around the house for five minutes.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Condolences

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In addressing a card of condolence, which is correct?

Mrs. Joseph Brown or
Mrs. Martha Brown.

The damage is done because I sent the card addressed to "Mrs. Joseph Brown" and have been told I was wrong. Was I wrong?

CLAIRE.

YOU addressed your card of condolence exactly right. And no damage has been done, as it would have been if you had used the widow's first name. After the death of a husband, we use the same form in addressing an envelope to her as we used when her husband was living—Mrs. Joseph Brown. It is extremely poor form to use any other name-form. This is the name that the widow still should use formally—Mrs. Joseph Brown.

The Maid of Honor

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Can a married sister act as maid of honor at her sister's wedding? Or is it her place to be matron of honor? I am a young bride of twenty-two and imagine that an older person would be more suitable for matron of honor.

M. L.

WHEN the chief attendant of the bride is married, she is referred to as a matron of honor, no matter how young or old she is. When she is unmarried, she is referred to as the maid of honor.

Introducing the Divorcee

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

What is the proper way to introduce a divorced woman? I have a child. Several friends have asked me how they should introduce me—Mrs. P. or Miss S.? Please enlighten me on this subject.

H. S. P.

I CANNOT tell you which name you should use, dear friend, for that depends on which name you choose to use, and, on whether, if you wished to return to your maiden name, this was made definite and allowable when you got your decree.

Usually women who are divorced choose to retain the Mrs., especially if they have a child.

The form of name that, in the social world, has been accepted by most divorcees, is the use of Mrs. before the last name of the maiden name used as a first name, and then the last name of the married name. That is, if Helen Marie Gilbert marries and divorces Henry Sothern, she would take the name Mrs. Gilbert Sothern. And some women prefer to be known as Mrs. Helen Sothern, though this is not, in the world that makes out social forms, considered good taste.

Engagement Announcements

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. How soon after an engagement should the announcement be made?

2. Would it be proper for the girl to issue invitations in her own name for a luncheon and bridge, at which time the announcement is to be made, or should the invitations be sent out by her mother?

L. P.

THE engagement announcement should be made as soon as convenient after the engagement has been determined upon. Of course, that is if formal announcement is to be made of the engagement.

2. It is much better form for the invitations to be sent out by the girl's mother. This kind of announcement is very important, should be very dignifiedly and importantly done and appropriately should be made through the sponsorship of the girl's mother. Of course, there need not be any announcement at all, and this is quite correct, but if there is to be one, it should be done with all dignity and social consequence.

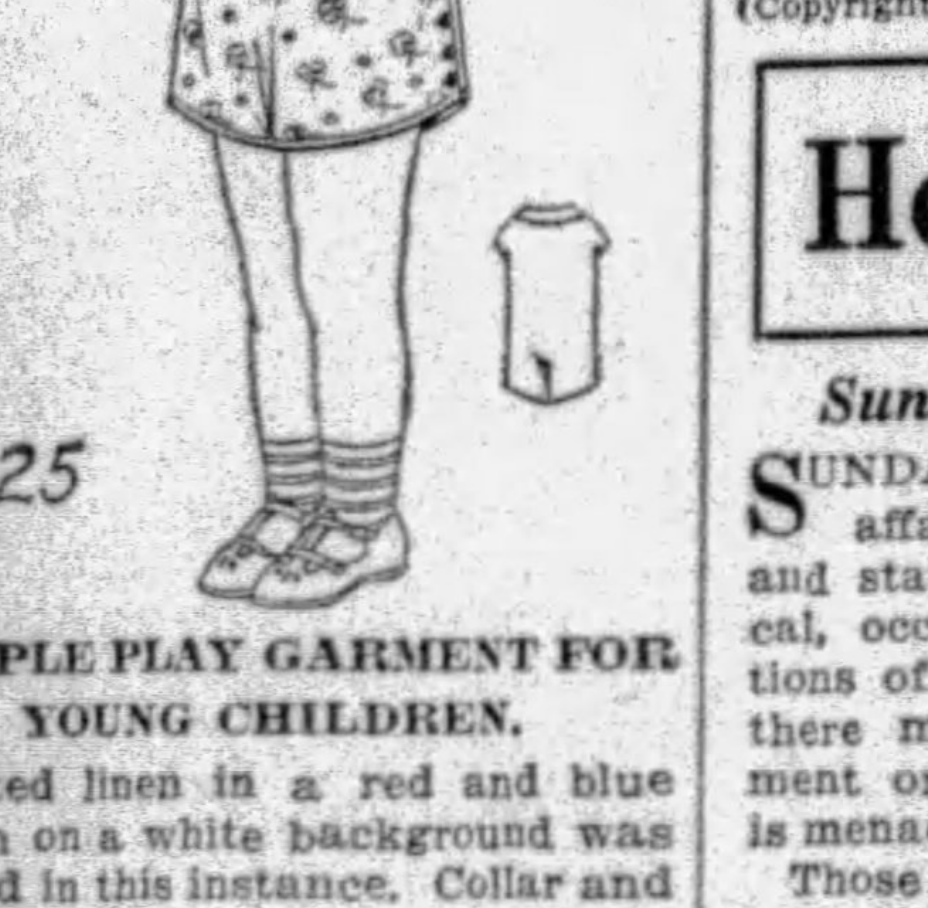
The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern



A SIMPLE PLAY GARMENT FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

Printed linen in a red and blue pattern on a white background was selected in this instance. Collar and band cuffs are of white organdy. One could have rep, pique, gingham or pongee. This neat little garment may be finished with or without the bishop sleeve portions. A group of narrow tucks lends fullness over the shoulders. The garment closes at the side and at the inner seam. It is made in slip-on style.

The pattern is cut in three sizes: 1, 2 and 3 years. To make a 2-year size will require 1⅜ yards of 32-inch material. If made without the bishop sleeve portions 1⅛ yards is required. For collar and band cuffs of contrasting material ¼ yard is required cut crosswise. To bind collar, leg edges and slash with bias binding will require 2½ yards 1½ inches wide.

COUPON.

This pattern will be sent on receipt of 15 cents (silver or 2c and 1c stamps). Make number, name, address, etc., plain. Send to Pattern Department, The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 22

SUNDAY'S horoscope prospers affairs of church, charity and state, as well as metaphysical, occult or original investigations of a scientific nature. But there may be small disappointment or delays and employment is menaced.

Those whose birthday it is may look for some financial advantages, with changes of benefit and assistance of friends and those in position. But the employment should be safeguarded, and there may be some delays or anxieties.

A child born on this day may have some excellent qualifications for success, but it may have to work hard and may succeed on its own account better than in employment.

Let your visit to that temple invisible be for naught but ecstacy and sweet communion.—Gilbran.

Monday, September 23

THE splendid mutual aspect between the luminaries on this day presages advancement, preferment and favors for those in the employment, and honors and assistance in important crises in places of position and power. Yet there is a hint of something sinister in secret agreements or conspiracy and the personal relations may not be as agreeable as desired.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of promotion in employment, but it may lean to and be subject to deception and subtlety in its methods. Also its personal contact may be undermined through deception or fraud.

Drawn By Dorothy Flack

WHICH would you rather be of the three? Of course, it would be gorgeous if you could be all three—and there's no real reason why you cannot be.

Because if you have health, you have wealth—a wealth that is worth more than King Mida's riches. And if you have Love you have wealth, too. But there are some who pride themselves on their material possessions and think neither of wisdom nor health. To them glowing health is something to be laughed at, and the wisdom that has chosen Love in preference to all other things is just too funny for words. Wealth is to them the breath of life, and nothing else matters.

Naturally, it follows that they can never hope to attract the happiness that health and Love bring. The wisdom that has chosen Love and its sweet burdens is far happier than the girl whose wealth is her sole attraction and thought.

But so it goes through life. However, if you are a wise girl you'll have all three, for health brings wealth, and Love, which has been attracted by health, is also wealth. So when you grow envious, stop and count your blessings, and I'm sure you'll never wish for material things if you have the greatest of all wealth—health and Love.

LOVE'S AWAKENING

A Continuation of Love's Embers

The Farmhouse Takes On the Aspect of a Hotel

AT Harry Underwood's peremptory question I caught my breath in dismayed conjecture. I knew that he must wish to bring some more people to the farmhouse for the emergency sojourn which the plot against Prince Georges had necessitated, and I guessed only too accurately the identity of the people for whom he wished to find sanctuary. With the arrival of Dicky and my father, expected hourly, every room in the farmhouse would be filled, for Prince Georges was in Dicky's room, and I had planned to give my husband Marion's, unoccupied since her departure for school. I knew my temperamental Peter Pan too well to expect him to put up with the happy-go-lucky solution proposed by Harry Underwood, for the alternating of the two men in Mr. Underwood's room.

But there was something in Mr. Underwood's voice and eyes which made of his query a command which I could not disregard, and I put aside my qualms and gave him an answer which I tried to make hearty and cheerful as well as prompt.

"Just as big a boarding house as you need," I told him. "This is an elastic house, and we can turn it into a fort, a hospital or a hotel, whichever you wish."

"It may be all three before we get through with this mess," he said grimly. "I suppose Lil's told you about the little affair this morning."

"Most of it," his wife said. "I was just picking up the ravelled stitches when you knocked."

"They'll have to wait a bit," he said, "while we turn ourselves into an animated moving company. October 1, will have nothing on us. Lady Fair, I want you to trek down to The Larches with me and persuade Miss Jackson that she must come to the farmhouse for the few days before we all go into the hotel in the city."

"I knew it!" I said to myself, but was careful to let no echo of my thought escape my lips. But, even as I gave outward acquiescence to Mr. Underwood's plain, my thoughts were scurrying worriedly over the problems which the installing of Princess Olina would involve. Prince Georges lying wounded in one room, Mary convalescent in another but almost ready to come down stairs and resume her place in the household, the spoiled, imperious princess flaunting her apparent conquest of Noel at Mary—I was sure she would do this—these emotional problems rose before me in company with the domestic difficulties which I foresaw in housing these scions of royalty whose lives had become so strangely interwined with ours.

"I can put Miss Jackson in Mary's room," I said. "But I don't know where I can put her—uncle and aunt."

"Oh, we all know they're faithful servants posing as relatives." Mr. Underwood began, but his wife interrupted him ruthlessly.

"Enough is enough, and this platter is heaped altogether too full," she said firmly. "It's all right to bring the princess over here. But those two old servants of hers will only be in the way.

"The woman is sick, and the man is too old to be of any real use. It's all very well to have a romantic vlision of faithful retainers fighting to the death for their princess, but they'd last about as long as a couple of mosquitoes under a fly swatter if these gentry took a notion to put the Larches on their calling list. Nay, nay, Pauline, alias Madge. Part of your job this afternoon will be to speed those two old dodos back to their own home, assuring them that their princess will follow them as soon as this present danger is over. Tell them to make it ready for her. You needn't hint to them that she probably will prefer the throne of Trees to their fireside after a few weeks."

Involuntarily, I shot a quick look at Noel, and saw the hot color flood his face at this prophecy, the fulfillment of which I know was an ardent wish second only to his longing to snatch Mary from the tangled web enmeshing her.

"I wish—" I said, stopped ashamed of my own reluctance.

"That I'd take over the job of extending the keys of the city—I mean the farmhouse—to Princess Olina," Lillian finished. "I'd like nothing better. You're too squeamish for the job of exiling the faithful relatives, anyway. Come on, Noel, let's turn ourselves into the Mayor's Committee for the Reception of Distinguished Visitors. Harry tell Madge about those things you picked up. I think I've served her the rest of the soup with crackers."

SMART COSTUME OF JERSEY TWEED SEEN WORN AT VICHY

Sketched in Paris

Fabric Important As Cut or Style

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Material needs continue to be met by the most remarkable array of fabrics assembled here in many a season. Ingenuity and originality are the watchwords of the brilliant people responsible for the wonderful weaves that seem to tumble in endless profusion from the looms. Fabric is as important as style or cut, for it gives animation to the mode. Witness the success of formal afternoon dresses of woolens, and the popularity of the tweed hats by Agnes and other milliners. Such innovations have created something of a revolution in the mode, but such movements are vitalizing as long as they do not encourage the extreme of the bizarre.

OF ALL the materials that are in use today, we find that jersey shares with tweed the distinction of being included in the collection of every designer. Couturiers who ordinarily do not interest themselves unduly in sports clothes, have found themselves fascinated by the possibilities of jersey, and have created some sports things of this material that received more attention and favorable comment, than the models that they had designed for formal wear.

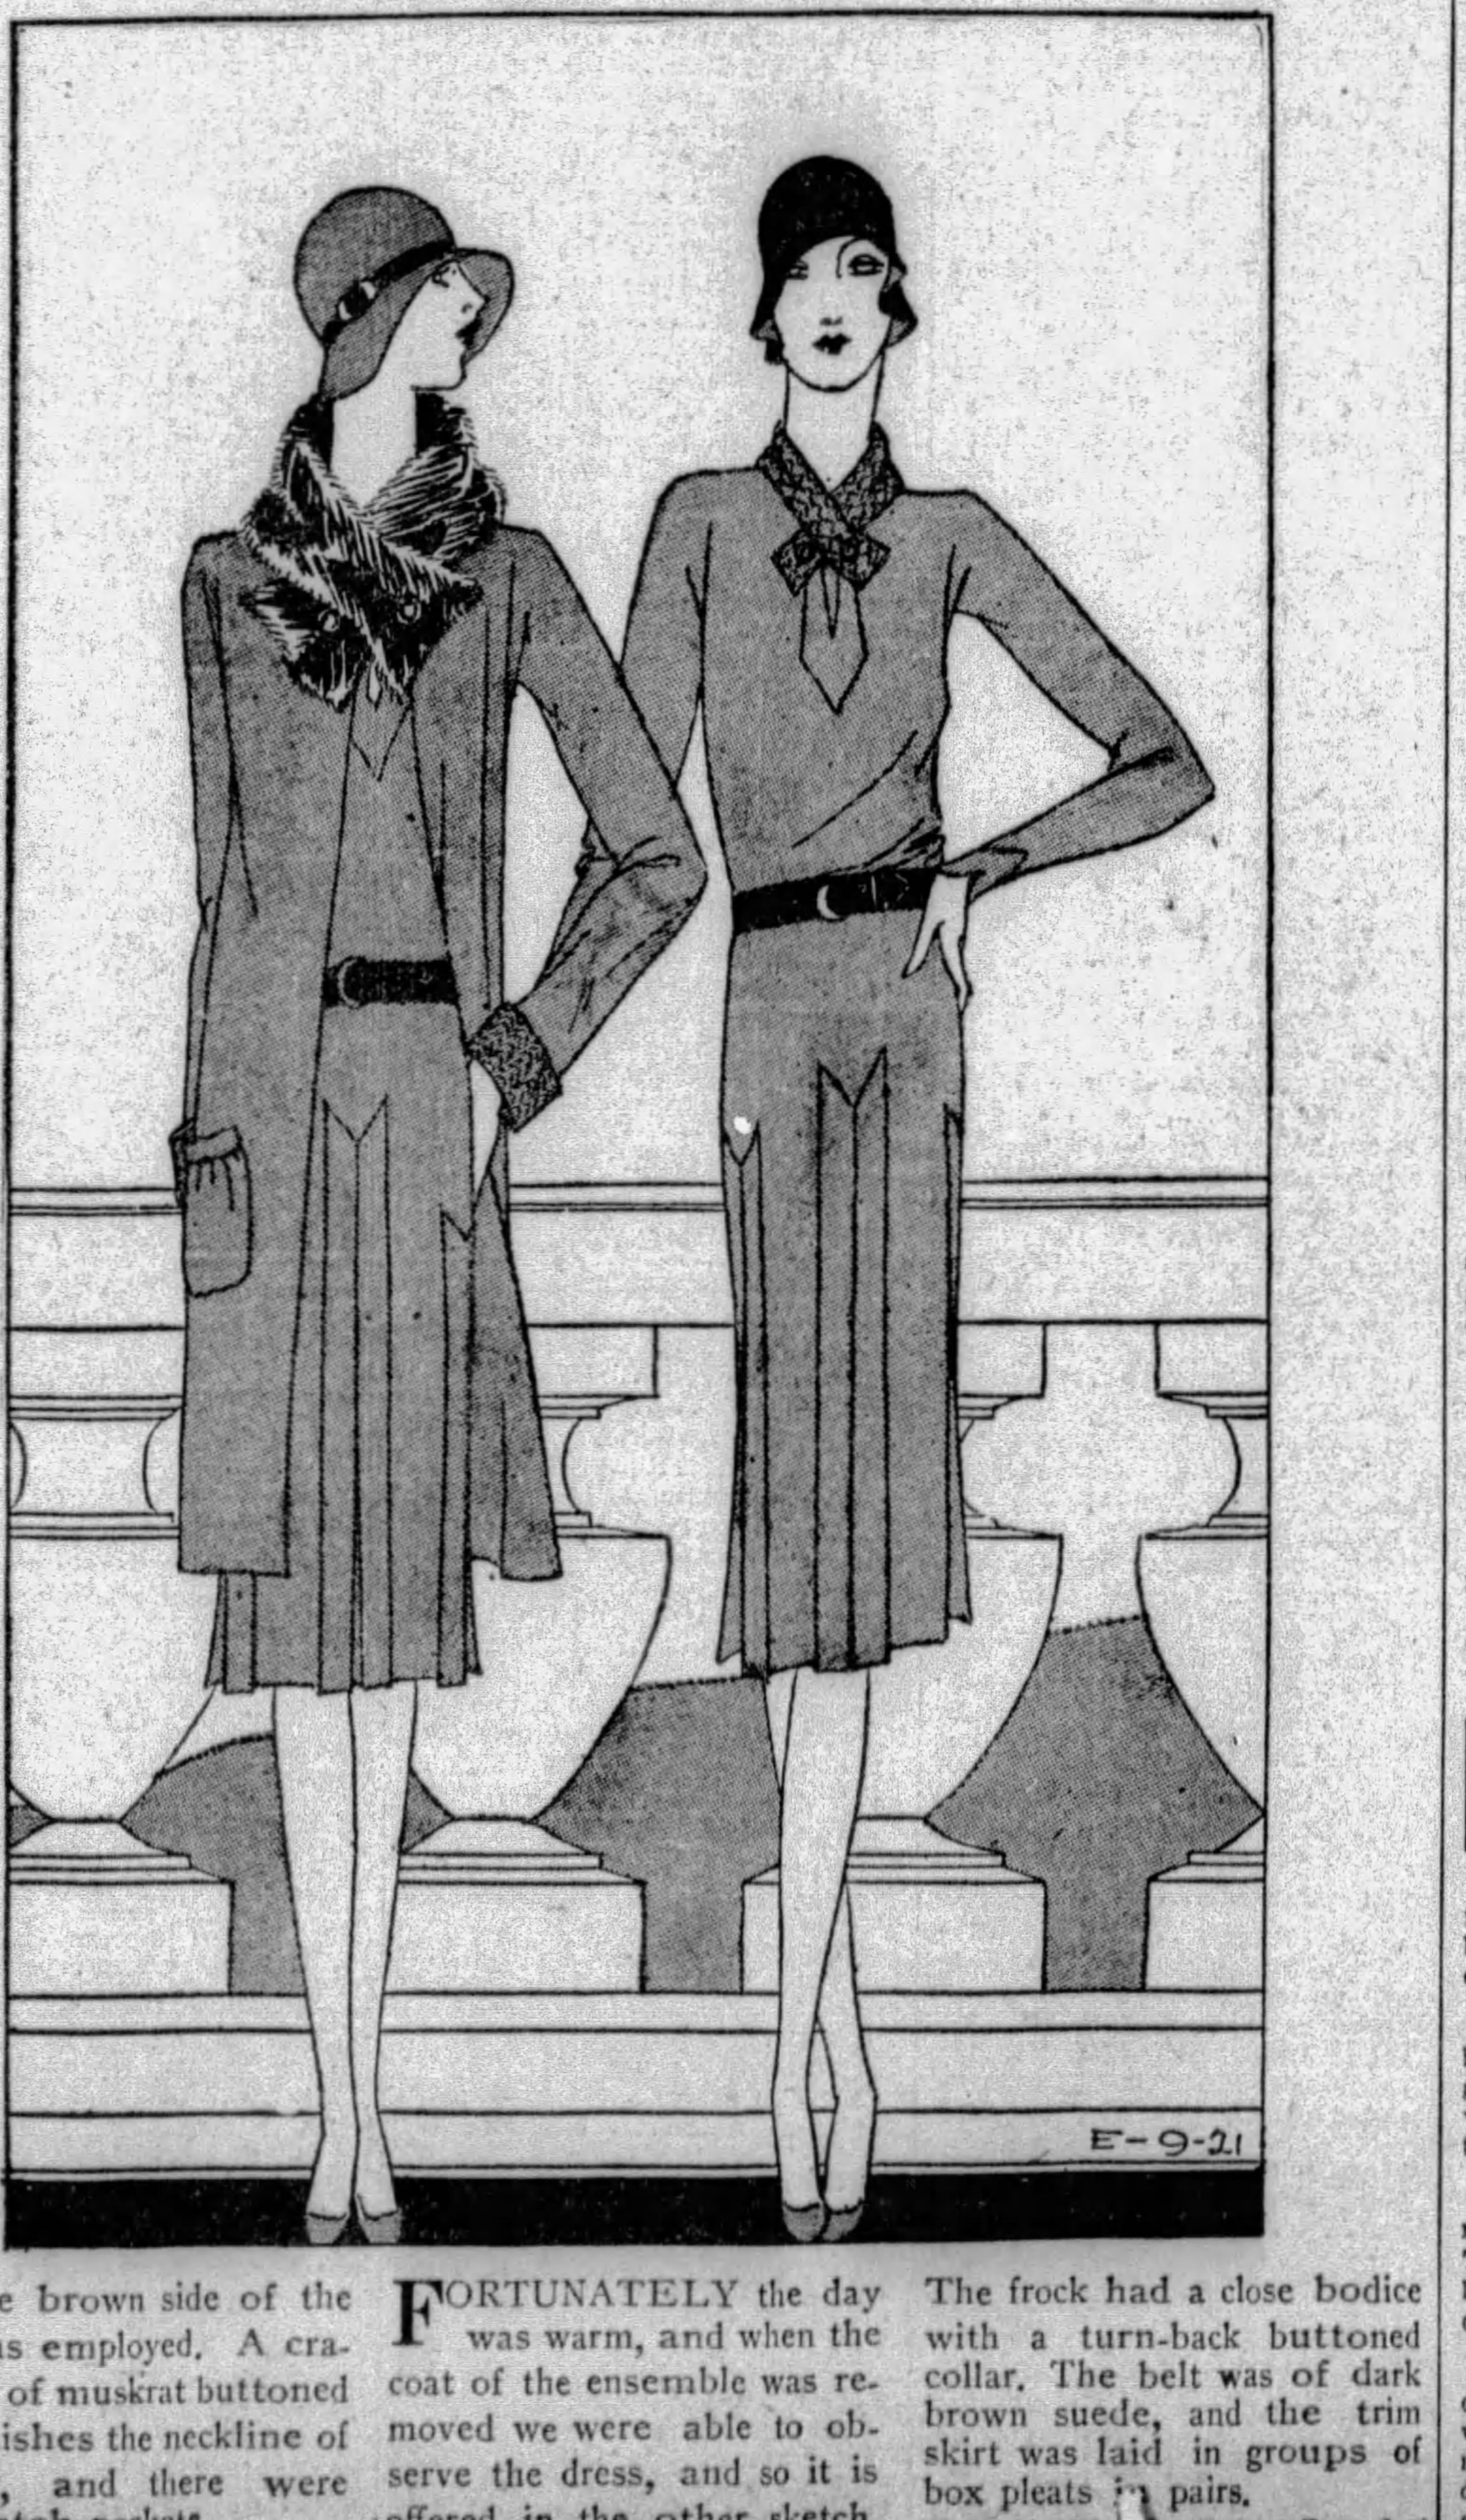
IT MUST have been such a couturier that fashioned the lovely jersey ensemble worn by a smart American girl at Vichy. It was of the reversible type of heavy tweed-like jersey of brown and beige to simulate tweed. The beige side made the coat and frock while for the cuffs on the coat and collar on the frock, the brown side of the jersey was employed. A cravat collar of muskrat buttoned across finishes the neckline of the coat, and there were shirred patch pockets.



FORTUNATELY the day was warm, and when the coat of the ensemble was removed we were able to observe the dress, and so it is offered in the other sketch.

The frock had a close bodice with a turn-back buttoned collar. The belt was of dark brown suede, and the trim skirt was laid in groups of box pleats in pairs.

How to Keep Well

Causes of Epilepsy Still Defy Science

IN the letters coming to my desk are many relating to the various diseases of the mind and nervous system. Many people ask me about epilepsy and what can be done for its relief

DR. COPELAND

When I was a boy in the lower grades I had a schoolmate named Willie. He used to have "fits." The poor little chap would let out a yell, fall on the floor in a convulsion, froth at the mouth and bite his tongue.

Even in that remote day I expected to be a doctor. The teacher knew this so she always assigned me to the duty of taking care of Willie. He was my first patient!

I don't know who told me to do it but the first step of my treatment always was to keep the teeth separated so as to prevent biting of the tongue. I kept a wooden clothes pin for this purpose and my first effort was to get it between his teeth. Aside from washing his face and preventing his harming himself in his convulsive efforts, I recall doing nothing else. In fact that's about all a real doctor could do.

Epilepsy is one of the mysterious diseases. Its causes are obscure. It is quite probable that an infection of some sort may be the root of the trouble.

It is wise for the epileptic to be given a thorough physical examination. Every effort must be made to discover and remove every possible source of infection. The progress made in the cure of functional insanity by getting rid of body poisons should be kept in mind in dealing with the epileptic. The medical profession is coming more and more to recognize the serious effect upon the system which follows the absorption of infections found in the teeth, tonsils, sinuses, generative organs and particularly the intestines.

It is expected that these poisons constantly absorbed by the blood must have serious effects upon the nervous system. Any poison, whether it comes from within or without the body, if taken in repeated doses is sure to create unpleasant symptoms. It may well be that epilepsy may be founded upon such a disturbance.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. F. W. G. Q.—What causes an offensive discharge from nose and throat?

A.—This is probably due to nasal catarrh.

Mrs. C. V. Q.—Can chilblains be cured?

A.—Yes.

Mrs. J. J. Q.—What can be done for enlarged pores?

A.—Enlarged pores may be made less noticeable by applying hot and cold compresses to the face, alternately, for 10 minutes, night and morning.

MOLLY. Q.—What should a girl aged 14, 5 ft. 2 inches tall, weigh? 2—What do you advise for pimples?

A.—She should weigh about 110 pounds. 2. Correct the diet by cutting down on sugars, starches and coffee. Eat simple food. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question.

Mrs. W. A. Q.—What do you advise for mucus colitis?

A.—This disease is very obstinate and does not readily yield to treatment. Indiscretion in diet often brings on an acute attack. Constipation should be corrected. The medical treatment must be directed by the family physician after a personal examination.

H. G. Q.—How can I reduce weight? 2—Is swimming a good exercise for reducing?

A.—Weight reduction is merely a matter of self-control as regards the diet. Exercise is, of course, essential. 2. Yes.

N. E. H. Q.—What do you advise for headache?

2.—Why do certain foods cause a burning in the stomach, also gas?

A.—An examination will determine the exact cause.

2.—This may be due to faulty diet and poor circulation.

Household Hints

Powdered borax strewn on the floor at night will keep away beetles. It will also keep ants out of a larder.

Meat may be made more tender by soaking it in vinegar or in vinegar and water. Tomatoes cooked with meat will also make it more tender.

Have you ever tried crushed-up newspaper for polishing glasses? Try this plan next time glasses look smeary, and the result will delight you.

BUC YEAR POOREST EXCEPT 1917-18

LITTLE remains of what President Barney Dreyfuss says has, with the exception of the World War years of 1917 and 1918, been Pittsburgh's poorest baseball season from the standpoint of attendance and receipts in all the 30 years of his connection with the local club. Following the conclusion of the series with the Braves here this afternoon, there will be only two games left on the schedule to be played at Forbes Field. These are carded for Friday and Saturday, October 4 and 5, with the Cardinals.

Barney Dreyfuss.

Only eight games all told will be on the Pirate books after today's contest, and six of them are to be played on foreign fields—five in St. Louis, from September 26 to 30, inclusive, and one in Chicago on October 6, the final day of the season.

Following today's finale in the Brave series, the Bucs will have four open dates in succession, which they will fill in by playing exhibition games at Dunkirk, Hornell, Rochester and Newark, O., in the order named, taking advantage of the opportunity to try out some of the young players who have come up from the minors to strive for places on the Corsair roster of 1930 or later.

THE passing of the season holds no regrets for the fans of the district, as injuries to star players around the midway stage of the race turned into a keen disappointment a year that had promised to end in a blaze of pennant glory. Interest was never overly hot in the first place, and it practically faded out after the home club's flag chance was ruined. The Pirates' road business this year was better than that of 1928, however.

President Dreyfuss, a sportsman first, and who has seen the ups and downs of baseball for almost four decades, takes the lean season here as part of the fortunes of war, but admits it has been the poorest experienced by the Pittsburgh club at home, barring 1917 and 1918, since he came here in 1900. The attendance at the games with the Robins on Monday and Tuesday, September 9 and 10, set a new low mark for Forbes Field, he said. "However," he added philosophically, "we've got to take the bad with the good. We have had good years, too, and we'll have them again."

THE time when Ted Rosenzweig, crack football and baseball player of Carnegie Tech, will be graduated from the Schenley Park school is a long way off, but if he is willing to consider entering professional baseball when that day comes there is likely to be quite a scramble for his services on the part of several major league clubs.

For in addition to being one of the best end men in football around these diggings, Rosenzweig also is a left-hand pitcher of more than ordinary promise. During the summer vacation period he pitched for a strong amateur nine in his home town of Claridge, Pa., and good judges who watched his work say he has the makings of a successful big leaguer. He is 5 feet 11 inches in height, weighs 180 pounds and is said to have loads of stuff.

Ted Rosenzweig.

THINGS would have broken a whole lot better for the Pirates in this year's National League race if Jess Petty had been able to find during the early part of the season the stride in which he is going during the closing part of the campaign. Petty, whose victory over the Braves here yesterday was his third in succession, lost six of his first eight games this year, but after serving in relief roles for a time he finally managed to shake off the jinx that had been pursuing him.

SINCE Petty's luck changed he has been pitching high-class ball nearly every time out and has been getting as good results as any hurler in the league, a fact that is attested by his record of having won nine of his last 12 games.

Jess has beaten Boston three times during that streak, Philadelphia and Brooklyn twice each, and New York and Chicago once each. He lost to New York twice and to Cincinnati once. The left-hander now has a balance on the right side of the ledger, having won 11 games against nine lost.

JOHNNY EVERS, acting manager of the Braves, and one of the smartest baseball men in the game, thinks it is all wrong for a club to relax between the winning of a pennant and the opening of the world series. He pointed out a couple of object lessons yesterday while discussing the coming struggle between the Cubs and the Athletics.

Johnny Evers.

"Back in 1906," Evers reminisced, "the Cub team on which I was playing set a world record of 116 games won in a season and clinched the pennant a couple of weeks before the end of the schedule. Several of the boys went on short vacations and there was a general let-down.

"THE White Sox, on the other hand, had to keep hustling right up almost to the finish to win the American League flag. What was the result? The Sox went into the big series in their best form while we were out of stride, and though the Cubs were overwhelming favorites the American Leaguers beat us in four games out of six. I remembered that when I was with the Braves in 1914, and urged Manager George Stallings not to permit the boys to let down for a single day after the pennant had been sewed up.

"STALLINGS adopted that policy and kept the team going at top speed. In fact they continued to play so hard that Red Smith, our regular third baseman, suffered a broken leg in a strenuous endeavor to reach a base in a game that didn't mean a thing to us.

"But as a result of the continued hustling we were able to enter the world series still going under a full head of steam. Everybody remembers what happened afterward. We beat the Athletics in four straight games, a feat that only the Yankees have equalled in a world series. It pays to keep on fighting. It's hard to get going again once you let down."

JACK SHARKEY, though he owns a fine jab, is not going to match his straight left against Tommy Loughran's when they meet in New York next Thursday night. According to Wilbur Wood and

EDINBORO BLUFFITES' FOE

The intercollegiate football season will have a semi-formal opening today, with three battles being scheduled in the tri-state district and some half dozen or more booked for other sections of the country.

Pittsburgh will get its first glimpse of varsity action as Duquesne University's Dukes battle Edinboro Teachers on the Bluff gridiron this afternoon. Edinboro, a newcomer on the Duquesne schedule, takes the place of Slippery Rock as the opening host for the Dukes. Slippery Rock will be here next week.

EAGER FOR GOOD START

Facing a tough campaign, Coach Layden is anxious to get his Dukes off on the right foot today, and will start what is now regarded as his varsity against the Teachers. Tavelli and Sammy Pratt will be at the ends; Skender and Kirby at the tackles; Kelleher and Clark at the guards and Silverstein at center.

In the back field, Capt. Buff Donnelli and Ganzy Benedict will pair off at the halves, Kovalchek will be fullback and McCarthy at quarter.

The Lineup

Duquesne—		Edinboro.
Travelli	L.E.	Anderson
Skender	L.T.	Ashbaugh
Kelleher	L.G.	Benninghoff
Silverstein	C.	Watson
Clark	R.G.	Detuerk

Pratt	R.E.	A. Arrowsmith
Benedict	L.H.	Hand
Donnelli (C)	R.H.	Duff
McCarthy	Q.	Riley
Kovalcheek	F.	Blaney

Officials—Referee, W. H. Frissell; umpire, A. H. Slack; linesman, S. A. McFarland.

WELL MATCHED

The Bobcats, with a crackerjack backfield and a weak line, can hardly hope to cope with the well-balanced Mountaineer eleven, and Ira Rodgers' boys look to be three touchdowns better than the Cats.

Waynesburg, hoping to stage a gridiron comeback, will run into trouble right off the bat. St. Vincents, with a veteran and fairly husky squad, tackle the Jackets today, and is primed for a victory over the Greene County eleven. The game should be a close one, with the result pretty much of a toss-up.

Other schools in the sector, including Pitt and Tech, will hold off with their opening games until next week.

PITT BREAKS CAMP

CAMP HAMILTON, WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 21.—When the Pitt Panthers break camp at noon today, it will climax the longest training season a Panther team has undertaken for several seasons. Eighteen days of strenuous practice have gone by and the Pitt team is rapidly approaching real condition.

Today's practice session will be limited to the morning. The annual regulation game between the 'Varsity and second teams will be put on, and then camp will be over for another year. While nothing is certain yet, it seems fairly reasonable to assume that the 'Varsity lineup for today's battle will be just about the same as the one that will start next week against Waynesburg.

The first team will have Donchess and Loehr, ends; Tully and McMurdo, tackels; Montgomery and Dimeolo, guards; Daugherty, center; Baker, quarter; Williams and Uansa, halves; and Parkinson at fullback.

With the possible exceptions of Baker and Loehr, this team is a pretty sure bet to face the Yellow Jackets a week from this afternoon.

JACKETS MEET ST. VINCENT'S

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Sept. 21.—The Waynesburg College football season will be ushered in here today when the Yellow Jackets meet St. Vincent's College, of Loretto, at College Field. Booked originally as a warmup contest, the game now looms as one of the hardest on the Waynesburg schedule and an unusually close contest is expected. Officials announced to handle the game are E. J. Cavanaugh, Pitt; R. E. Cadigan, Syracuse and C. B. Quailey, Pitt.

MONDAY—HE LOST A PERFECT GAME.

RUDY DEFEATS MURRAY AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Handicapped by his short stature and outboxed in the first two rounds, Young Rudy, of Charleroi, came back in typical courageous fashion to force Jackie Murray, rangy and clever Negro welterweight, of the Hill, to fight his sort of a fight with him, and, once he had Jackie mixing, slugged the latter into defeat in an artistic manner in the 10-round main bout of the opening show of the indoor season in the Moose Temple, downtown, last night.

Only a fair-sized crowd turned out for the inaugural offering, but it was an enthusiastic gathering and was not lacking in appreciation of the lusty clouting that was offered in spots in the main event and the six-round second preliminary, in which Frank Monroe, veteran middleweight, of Fair Haven, and Harry Spencer, of Washington, Pa., fought to a popular draw and a sure return bout.

BELMONT BEATS CARTER

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, battered Billy Carter, Negro veteran, of Connellsville, into decisive defeat in the six-round semi-final, but, despite a heavy hammering of the body and left hook shelling of the chin, he couldn't stop Carter. Indeed, he floored him only once, at the end of the fifth round, and Billy was beginning to get up when the bell rang at the count of seven.

Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville, defeated Tommy Ward, of the South Side, in the six-round opener, in which Ward did well until he tired midway in the going.

In the main event Murray dropped many right-handers on Rudy's chin and also often brought him up short with a stiff left, but he was unable to hold off the bulldog-like rushes of his opponent and made the mistake of mixing with him in close. Here the short-armed Rudy excelled, and, as he can "take it" better than Murray, he several times had the latter woozy and covering or hanging on. Jackie was in trouble in the third round and out on his feet throughout most of fifth and did a lot of holding in the ninth and tenth. Rudy won four rounds, two of them by wide margins, while Murray took the same number, with two even, but never had Rudy in distress.

Night Football Big Success At New Castle

NEW CASTLE, Sept. 21—(AP.)—Night-time football was inaugurated here last night at Ben Franklin stadium, 10,000 fans viewing a game in which New Castle High School defeated Grove City High, 13 to 0.

The experiment, the first in this part of the country, was declared by football enthusiasts to have been a success from every viewpoint, and the local school will play three more evening games before switching to daylight contests during the latter half of the season.

Fourteen huge floodlights, arranged to make for a minimum of shadow, lighted the gridiron and spectators said they were able to follow each play as easily as if it were daylight. A white football was used.

The game was started at 8:15, just as darkness was falling. Next Friday evening's game will be with Rayen High of Youngstown, O.

DAWSON BEATEN

BUFFALO, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Billy Kowalik, of Buffalo, defeated Freddie Dawson, of Jamestown, here last night, dropping Dawson twice in the second and fifth rounds. Kowalik's punch was too much for the fast Jamestown boy. Kowalik weighed 129 pounds; Dawson 130½.

PIE AND ADAM DRIVE IN 100 RUNS

Pie Traynor and Adam Comorosky, the inseparable roommates of the Pirate band, have a lot in common on the ball field, too. Traynor and Comorosky have each reached the century mark in driving in runs, the Polish Flyer beating his "roomie" to the feat by a day or two.

When it is considered that Pie and Commy each missed about 25 games it will be seen that they were exceptionally consistent at the barrier with runners on the sacks. It is no easy feat for a player to pound over 100 markers while taking part in the full schedule.

COMOROSKY LEADS

Comorosky owns another distinction in his first full season. The coal miner of the bowie legs is leading the club in stolen bases with 21 thefts to his credit. Commy played in a lot of games under the handicaps of injuries. He takes a lot of chances with fence. It is a fact, however, that most of his spectacular plays have been made on hostile fields.

The Giants are the only club in the league to outdistance the Pirates on season's play. The Quarkers were able to get an even split with the Freebooters, who showed the Cubs how it should be done. The Buccos took the measure of the Bears twelve times in twenty-two fights.

OUTFIELD GOOD

The Pirates should be well fixed for star outfielders next season. In the Waners and Comorosky, the Ensmen sport one of the best patrols in the game. Jimmy Mosolf may bat himself into a utility berth next year while Fred Brickell has proved his worth on several occasions.

The Pirates will barnstorm for the first half of the coming week. Manager Ens will take his club to Dunkirk tomorrow for a contest and will proceed to Hornell and Rochester in the order named. The Pirates are slated for five games with the Cardinals beginning Thursday.

CHARLESTON BOWS

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Two home runs by Wayland Dean, Huntington centerfielder, accounted for a total of six runs here yesterday as the Huntington Boosters took the first game of the playoff series of championship of the Tri-State League from the Charleston Senators, 8 to 1.

Five full games ahead of the Giants and with only nine more games to play, the Pirates today were just about convinced they were in for second-place money as they prepared to meet the Braves. The battle of this afternoon will mark the last meeting of the season between the two clubs, and the Forbes Field schedule for the year will be finished, save two games with the Cardinals in the first week of October.

And the whole Pirate family will cheer when the curtain goes down on the local season. The finish of the championship race throughout the league always is hailed with delight by the players, who have to fight homesickness about this time each year, but there are other reasons for wishing to call it a season in Pittsburgh.

ATTENDANCE SMALL

Lack of patronage has taken the big edge of things in the Oakland Orchard. When the Pirates were leading or were contenders for the first position, the attendance was hardly better than fair, and once the Cubs took their spurt, the turnstiles became very inactive. So the Pirates are just playing out their card, yet Jewel Ens in getting in a lot of work with an army of promising rookies.

Ens will send Ervin Brame to the slab this afternoon. The tall right-hander is having a big season everything considered, his last exploit being a five-hit victory over the clouting Phillies. Boss Evers of the Braves will probably call upon Ben Cantwell or Johnny Cooney. Evers has used a lot of southpaws on the Pirates in the present series and the lefthanders have proved quite troublesome. The two clubs have split the four games played.

The Oaklanders scored an easy victory over the Tribe yesterday, but they had to get a former Pirate rookie out of the way to make the verdict sure. The score was 10 to 3. George Peery, sorrel-top southpaw who started his major-league career as a Pirate, was painfully hurt in the sixth inning when a vicious drive from Rolly Hemsley's bat struck him on the pitching wrist.

BOMBARD RECRUIT

The department of Peery brought another recruit to the scene in a hurry. Clay Touchstone hardly landed on Fogarty Knoll before Earl Sheely bounded a double off the scoreboard that was the signal for a bombardment.

Lloyd Waner featured the bombastic drive with the longest homer of his brilliant career. The wee marvel of the sport smacked the ball into the upper deck of the rightfield stands with two of his mates on the paths, the three tallies running the total of the inning to six runs. The sensational drive also rang up Lloyd's twenty-first game of consecutive hitting.

Jess Petty worked the entire game for the Pirates. The Silver Fox pitched under wraps after the sixth. Jess was bearing down, however, when Les Bell connected for a homer into the rightfield seats.

LION MATERIAL ONLY FAIR, CARD TOUGH

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 21.—A rugged schedule and a squad that is not likely to pay extra heavy dividends in games won, makes the football outlook here at old Penn State for 1929 a bit bleak. The Lions do not figure to be as strong as they were last year, which certainly was not a banner State year, and unless some of the new men came through in a superlative degree, this fall's litter will not go down in history as one to tell the grandchilluns about.

As is customary, Coach Hugo Bezdek, the gentleman who can take more socks on the whiskers and come up a' smilin' than any other coach in the country, is optimistic, not to any great degree, but he thinks his squad is going to develope into a much more powerful outfit than it promises at this time. The squad did not impress me as being as promising as last year's, which included such fine players as George Delp, Steve Hamas and Allie Wolff, but then, the ability of those lads was known, and maybe one or two of these State sophomores will ascend to greater heights than any of the three mentioned.

FOUR STARS LOST

The principal losses from the 1928 eleven were Hamas, Delp, Wolff and Collins. All but Delp were backs, George being a wingman of better than average ability.

Bez is seeking to nullify the loss of Hamas by making a startling shift. He has transplanted Capt. Jack Martin, star guard, from the line into the backfield, and Martin has shown such promise at the fullback post that he may be kept there permanently.

Martin made his debut as a back a few days ago when he went to the fullback post on the second team. He engaged in scrimmage at this position for a few days, and his progress was so rapid that he was graduated to the varsity fullback post. As a lineman, the Lion leader is fast and very aggressive, but rather light. His speed has stood him in good stead in his efforts to become a ball toter.

Lascish is another hefty fullback candidate who has shown considerable promise. Snyder, an excellent passer, is doing a fairly creditable job of filling the shoes of the departed Wolff. Bezdek's remaining need is a star wing, and he has not given up hope of finding one. The starting line will be a fairly veteran affair, but will be short of experienced reserves, always a sad lack.

THE BACKFIELD

If Joe Miller, the Wilkinsburg lad whose present status is in the air, becomes available, the Lion coaches will have the wherewithal for a snappy backfield. French, at present the kingpin of the backfield; Diedrich, Martin, Lasisch, Snyder, and Evans are a likely lot of first-string ball toters, with Moonyes, Livezey and Braddock and Saracinsky possessing enough class to be called formidable reserves.

At present, Martin is being used at fullback, with Snyder at quarter and French and Deidrich or Evans at the halves. Evans, a good kicker, rangy and fast enough, has been getting a bit the best of it with Deidrich, though the latter is not out of the running by any means.

Snyder, an accurate passer and good enough ball carrier, appears to be the first choice at quarterback. With the possible exception of French, Miller, if he's in there, all of these men have yet to prove their big time ability.

A factor auguring well for the success of the attack is seen in the fact that the entire set of backfield men can pass well, and that Evans and French are both good booters.

THE ENDS

Kaplan, Edwards, Stahley and Struble, all of whom have had more or less experience, are engaged in making a hot fight for the wing jobs. Kaplan, who played good football against Pitt and Notre Dame last season, and Edwards may get first call. To bolster this quartet, Coach Bezdek is attempting to convert Braddock, a back, into a terminal custodian, and is planning to give Struble some chance in the backfield.

THE TACKLES

Panaccion, Shawley and Zerolla, veterans, and McMillen and Gillard, sophomores, are the leading candidates for the tackle posts. Panaccion and Shawley played regularly last year, and unless they have gone back too far, will get first call at the positions as the campaign opens this season. McMillen, however, has shown great promise.

THE GUARDS

Even with Capt. Jack Martin, star guard of last season, shifted into the backfield, the Lion mentors may take their choice of two from a strong list of guards. Ricker, Parna and Zorella are the outstanding holdovers, with Hamilton the best looking prospect from the freshman squad. It is because he has an abundance of good guards that Bezdek was prompted to try out Martin as a back.

Ricker, who played enough last year to win a letter, and who has had almost as much experience as has Martin, looms as one of the regulars at guard, and Zorella, Parna and Venerosso are in a neck-and-neck race for the post vacated by Martin.

THE CENTER

Eshbach and McAndrews, who shared the center job last season, are dividing the duty again. DeCindus, a guard by choice, may be converted into a snapperback, in fact, Bez is working toward that end now.

Early season injuries and illness have handicapped the Lions to no little extent. Shawley broke a rib in a scrimmage soon after the training season opened. French, Panaccion and Stahley have been having trouble with their teeth, and other minor hurts have contributed to State's delinquency in getting into condition.

The schedule, after the first three games, will be no path of roses. The season opens with Niagara U., the Falls eleven playing here. Lebanon Valley will invade Beaver Field next, and then will come Marshall College, of West Virginia.

Following this final preliminary game, the Lions battle New York University, Lafayette, Syracuse, Penn, Bucknell and Pitt in succession. Lafayette and Bucknell will be played at home.

Larry Conover, Bob Higgins, Dutch Hermann and Joe Bezdek, the latter a newcomer to the coaching taff, are assisting Bezdek. Hermann, varsity basketball coach, ing staff, are assisting Bezdek. Neil Fleming is still holding forth as graduate manager, something he very probably will continue to do as long as he cares for the job.

slugging bee that lasted throughout the first round, with Monroe doing the forcing and Spencer the cleaner hitting. The second round was much the same, on a slightly tamer scale. In the third, Monroe began to load up his punches and he hammered Spencer on the verge of submission, forcing him to go completely on defense against the ropes, but he could not put over a finishing punch and Spencer was warding him off at the bell. The next two rounds were even and, in the last, Spencer, having outlasted the veteran, was forcing the fight.

Referee Grayber voted for Monroe on the strength of his having had Spencer in such a bad way, but the crowd vigorously applauded the judges' decision of a draw and gave the rivals a big hand.

The weights for the bouts: Murray, 142, and Rudy, 146½; Belmont, 148, and Carter, 147½; Monroe, 160½, and Spencer, 159½; Ward, 147, and DeLuca, 146¾.

CRAWLEY ENDS TRAINING

Tommy Crawley, of the South Side, winds up his training today for his 10-round main event with Phil McGraw, Greek florist, of Detroit, featuring the final show of the season in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, next Monday night. McGraw will arrive in town tomorrow morning and will work out here in the afternoon.

Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., who boxes Tiger Joe Randall, of Elizabeth, Pa., in the 10-round windup at McKeesport next Thursday night, is a brother of Mike Dempsey, the former middleweight, who boxed Champion Mickey Walker at Motor Square Garden about five years ago. Mickey, incidentally, hails from Elizabeth, N. J. Trippe has boxed Cuddy DeMarco, Dick Conlon, Tug Phillips, Eddie (Kid) Wagner and a host of other well-known men in the lightweight and welterweight classes.

Howard Mayberry, of Donora, fresh from his victory over Bobby Dempsey at McKeesport Thursday night, wants to fight Johnny McCoy, Midget Mike O'Dowd, Benny Schwartz or any of the other bantams and may appear here shortly in one of these battles.

other experts who have watched the former gob in training, Jack plans to weave under the straight lefts sent his way and come up with left hooks to the body.

In other Words, Sharkey apparently hopes to wear Loughran down with a body attack. To do that he will have to make Tommy come to him, however, and it is said that no one has been able to do that except Martin Burke, who aroused the Philadelphian by butting him in the first round.

Howard Jones.

HOWARD JONES, football coach at the University of Southern California, has picked an all-time all-Pacific Coast eleven, though admitting that his knowledge of coast timber is to some extent limited, he having piloted a Far Western team for only four years. Of the 11 men he names he has seen only eight in action. One of his nominations is Morley Drury, whose brother, Herb, has for years been a star on the Pittsburgh hockey team. Jones' selections follow: Ends, Brick Muller, of California, and Ted Shipkey, of Stanford; tackles, Stew Beam of California, and Jess Hibbs, of Southern California; guards, Seraphim Post, of Stanford, and Bert Heiser, of Southern California; center, Babe Horrell, of California; quarterback, Morley Drury, of Southern California; halfbacks, Chuck Carroll and George Wilson, of Washington; fullback, Erie Nevers, of Stanford.

25,000 ATTEND P. R. R. MEET AT ALTOONA

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 21.—More than 25,000 employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad were gathered here today for the opening of the ninth annual system athletic championships, which got under way at Cricket Field at 10 o'clock this morning.

The Central Region, winner of the championship last year, and which includes in its membership employes in the Pittsburgh district, was prepared to make a determined effort to retain its laurels. The Central region last year broke the Eastern region's monopoly on system championship, the Easterners having won the championship for seven straight years.

The program today was an extensive one, calling for track and field finals, golf, quoits, horseshoes, trapshooting, rifle shooting, tennis and other events.

One of the feature events is the opening contest of a three-game series for the baseball championship, slated to get under way at 3:30. The series brings together Altoon Shops and Columbus. The winner will meet the champion of the Missouri Pacific Lines in St. Louis on October 12.

Special trains brought the employes of the railroad to this Mountain City. More than 12 bands accompanied the athletes and spectators. Leading officials of the railroad from its six divisions attended the meet.

CHARLEROI COPS SERIES TITLE

HAGERSTOWN, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Charleroi, winner of the Middle Atlantic League championship, yesterday captured the tri-state title by defeating Hagerstown, 5 to 2, in a tenth inning rally. The series for the title went five games, the first of which was won by Hagerstown.

Drugmond did the pitching for the victors and allowed only eight hits, which were well scattered. The Pennsylvanians got 10 hits off Stremus. The score:

Griffith Stops Cook; Al Fay Is Victor

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Jerry (Tuffy) Griffith, sensational Sioux City, Iowa, walloper, chalked up his sixth victory as a heavyweight last night by stopping George Cook, Australian trial horse, in the fourth round of their scheduled 10 round bout at the Chicago Stadium. He won on a technical knockout when a towel came fluttering into the ring after Cook had been floored twice in the fourth and once in the third.

Paul Pantaleo, Chicago, defeated Joe Lousier, of Alabama, on a technical knockout in two rounds.

Al Fay, the Jack Kearns-coached heavyweight of Pittsburgh, won the verdict over Al Friedman, of Boston, in 10 rounds, with the crowd booing the decision. Fay had too much boxing skill for the Bostonian.

A'S REST WHILE CUBS WORK

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

MACKS' ROOKIE SQUAD LOOKS STRONG

Associated Press.

With more than two weeks of sham battles remaining prior to the big fight for the title, the Athletics and the Cubs are moving toward the world series in exactly opposite manners. Working on the theory that the best rest is a hard day's work, Joe McCarthy is keeping his regulars at their accustomed posts, as the hirelings of Cornelius McGillicuddy take their ease upon the bench—or even away from the park altogether.

CHILDREN'S DAY

It's children's day almost every afternoon at Shibe Park now, and from the capers some of the juveniles are cutting, it might be inferred that the Mackmen will boast a strong freshman squad in 1930. Young Eric McNair, widely-heralded shortstop from Memphis, by way of Knoxville, made his big league bow yesterday to the accompaniment of three hits in five attempts, and scored the winning run for the Athletics in a 10-inning 2 to 1 triumph over the Tigers.

Master McNair's antics vindicated, for the moment at least, Connie Mack's payment of $25,000 for his release, but they placed a somewhat lower valuation upon a prize Tiger purchase from Evansville in the Three Eye League, Whitlow Wyatt. The young Detroit pitcher also was making his debut in the big time, but the zeal of Master McNair spoiled everything for the midwestern recruit.

Connie Mack employed only Simmons from his regular corps. The Milwaukee Pole failed to hit in four attempts and then retired in favor of French. Simmons' average fell to .366, but he retained the league lead over Lew Fonseca, who got two out of four at Boston and climbed to .362.

FERRELL CHECKS RED SOX

Wesley Ferrell checked a late Boston rally in the game at the Fenway, and Cleveland won by 4 to 2. The Red Sox outhit the invaders by 13 to 9, but had 12 men stranded. A wild throw by Goose Goslin in the fifth enabled the Browns to shade Washington by 1 to 0, Alvin Crowder winning and Myles Thomas losing. A blast of winter at the downtown offices of the Yankees froze up all the cash registers in the stadium, and Edward G. Barrow hit upon the idea of two games on Sunday as a solution.

The Pirates stopped the Braves by 10 to 3 in the only National League game.

Wet grounds in St. Louis built up a Sabbath double-header for the Cardinals and the Robins. The rest of the league had a scheduled open date.

ARKLE IS VICTOR OVER WEBER

MORGANTOWN, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—B. F. Arkle, Wheeling, won the men's singles trophy of the first annual Morgantown Country club invitation tennis tournament here yesterday. Arkle took every set from Wilhelm Weber, Clarksburg, 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

The men's doubles trophies went to Arkle and Frederick Gelby, of Martins Ferry, O., who won a hard fought match from Weber and Dr. E. N. Flowers, Clarksburg, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, 5-7, 7-5.

In the doubles semi-finals Arkle and Melby eliminated Hugh Graham and H. D. Pickett, Fairmont, 6-3, 6-0 and Weber and Flowers bested Herst Koblegard and W. G. Johnson, Clarksburg, 6-3, 6-2.

ALBANY BEATEN

MANCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Manchester, of the New England League, defeated Albany, of the Eastern League, 2-1, here yesterday, in the first of a four-game series. The teams are champions of their respective leagues.

CANZONERI WINS

PLAY NO. 18.

Clancy, of Holy Cross, in a game against Providence, is about to receive a punt, and, noting that Zande, guard on the opposing team, is only a few strides in front of him, signals for a fair catch. Zande halts his charge down the field and Clancy fumbles the ball. Clancy snatches it up, and, behind quickly formed interference, races 80 yards down the field to the goal.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

The referee rules that a legitimate touchdown has been made by Clancy, of Holy Cross, because as soon as the ball was fumbled it was a free ball and the rules governing a fair catch do not apply. Zande would not have been permitted to run for a touchdown had he recovered the ball, however. Had he gained control of it, the ball would have gone over to Providence at the spot.

SOCCER SEASON OPENS HERE

TODAY'S GAMES
DISTRICT LEAGUE

Clan Douglas at Pierpont Motors (Homewood Playgrounds.)
Pittsburgh Celtics at Union Switch and Signal.
Twin Boro at Pittsburgh Rovers (Leslie Park.)

By TOM BIRKS

Pittsburgh soccer fans have three games for their afternoons' entertainment today. The District League will inaugurate its 1929-30 schedule, and six well-balanced clubs will start in quest of the title now held by the defunct Pittsburgh Soccer Club.

Pittsburgh soccer will now be on the field this season, but the Pierpont Motors will have most of the talent that flashed the Blue and White for Carl Ekequist last year.

All of the games look good. Last season Twin Boro was very weak, but it is understood that the club contemplated changing its name, that some live wires now have control, and that new players will be wearing its colors this season.

The Rovers will probably flash the same lineup that looked so good last season. This Lawrenceville bunch of fellows play wonderful football and deserve all the honors that go with soccer.

The Union Switch and Signal eleven, primed to the minute, will meet the fighting Celtics. The Green and White usually makes 90 minutes of hectic football for any team in the district, and while Jack Thomas has lined up a good club to represent the Switch this winter, the Celtics should not be treated lightly. Pierponts will have a lot of ceremony at the opening game. Howett, secretary-treasurer of the Motors company will be on hand to kick off, and a big crowd is expected at the game. The kick-off will be at 3:30.

GUNN IN PINE VALLEY EVENT

PINE VALLEY, N. J. Sept. 21.—Alex Knapp, of Baltimore, matched his morning round, a 76, with another in the afternoon for an aggregate of 152 to carry off the medal in the 36-hole qualifying round in the Crump memorial tournament at the Pine Valley Country Club yesterday.

Watts Gunn, Oakmont, turned in a score of 86-78—164 to finish among the qualifiers, while George Flinn, another Pittsburgher, missed out with 88-81—169. The qualifiers follow:

Alec Knapp, Baltimore	76-76—152
R. W. Woolworth, Mt. Kisco	77-78—155
John Riddell, Jr., Lakeville	83-73—156
E. H. Driggs, Jr., Lakeville	79-78—157

W. M. Reekie, Pine Valley	84-79—163
E. H. Molthan, Pine Valley	81-83—164
Sayre McLeod, Jr., Pine Valley	83-81—164
Watts Gunn, Oakmant	86-78—164
G. F. Hackl, Jr., Lakeville	82-83—165
Max Marston, Pine Valley	83-82—165
W. B. McCullough, Jr., Huntingdon	78-88—166
John Ayling, Pine Valley	86-80—166

BIKE RACERS TIED

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(INS.)—Franco Georgetti, American motor-paced bike champion, today was in a tie for first place with George Chapman in the chase for the 1929 motor-paced title. Georgetti advanced as a result of his finishing second to Charley Jaeger in a 30-mile national motor-paced championship race, the thirty-fourth of a series of 40, at the New York velodrome.

Special Rule Covers White Footballs

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Night football games among schools and colleges has reached such a stage, with the advent of the 1929 season, that the National Football Rules Committee has issued a special ruling to permit the use of white balls for arclight battles.

The ruling, announced by Edward K. Hall, chairman of the committee, made it clear that the use of a football of a color other than the regulation tan specified as in the gridiron code this year for the first time, must be by mutual agreement of the contesting teams. If there is disagreement the tan pigskin must be employed.

Prior to this year there has been no provision in the rule book on the color of the ball.

D. & E. TRIMS HARVEY, 51-0

ELKINS, W. Va., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Davis and Elkins opened the West Virginia football season by parading through the Morris Harvey College line for a 51-0 victory here yesterday.

The state champions were too heavy and too wise for the Morris Harvey boys.

Two Outboard Boat Records Smashed

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Two world records for outboard motorboats were shattered by racers in the Eastern Division elimination contest of the New England Outboard Motor Boat and the Middle Atlantic States Outboard Motor Boat Associations on the Connecticut River here yesterday.

Earl R. Thomas, of Fall River, Mass., driving his Class B, Division 1, Short Circuit II, did 41.28 miles an hour. Al Buffinton, also of Fall River, with Cute Craft Herself, in Class B, Division II, did 42.45 miles an hour.

McChesneytown Grid Card Opens Today

The McChesneytown gridiron machine will swing into action this afternoon at McChesneytown, meeting the Hyde Park gridders, of Leechburg.

Manager Kennedy feels that the Big Red machine will be far stronger than it was last year, when West View defeated the Latrobe boys in the Independent title final.

Jimmy McGinnis will be calling signals today and Brown will again be at end, with Bill Johnson playing fullback. The tilt will be called at 2:30.

GOLF

AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

Fish-29

How is the long iron backspin played?

Answered by
LAURIE AYTON

Always a consistent place winner in the big tournaments. Famed for his accuracy and steadiness under fire.

Play this shot off the left heel. Keep a stiff left arm, especially at moment of impact. Be sure to hit down and through the ball, taking the pivot an inch or so after it. Be sure that your wrists are firm and rigid at the time the club head hits the ball. Follow through straight toward the hole, letting the club head go into the air at least shoulder high. The weight should transfer from right to left foot with the movement of the club head.

KAUFFMANN LEADS NATALE AT SCHENLEY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Carl F. Kauffmann, with a 7-up advantage, had a fair chance of retaining his laurels in the annual golf championship at the Schenley Park public links, as he set out with Joe Natale on the last 18-hole grind of the 36-hole final round this morning. The pair played the first half of the match yesterday afternoon, the defending titlist having all the better of the contest. Kauffmann's 68 was by far too good for Natale's 75.

The semi-final matches in the morning, at 18 holes, saw only one upset as Francis Lally was eliminated by Natale, 2 and 1. Mike Galido, member of this year's National public links team, gave Kauffmann a tough battle, but was 1 down at the finish.

NEAR DISQUALIFICATION

The semi-finalists almost met with disqualification at the hands of Tournament Director Al McBride, Schenley's capable and popular professional, when they insisted on playing a 36-hole round, despite the fact the tourney program, arranged prior to its starting, called for an 18-hole test. They played only after heated debate with the director.

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, in charge of the course, yesterday ordered another cut in the tourney program, from 36 to 18 in the final round, but consented to a split 36-hole final when it was learned 18 could be played yesterday and another round this morning. Director Lang had the interests at least of several thousand other permit-holders who wished to make use of the course this afternoon.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

The last half of the final round got under way at 10 o'clock this morning. Yesterday's results follow:

First sixteen, semi-finals—Joe Natali defeated Francis Lally, 2 and 1; Carl Kauffmann defeated Mike Galido, 1 up. First half of final—Kauffmann was leading Natali, 7 up.

Second sixteen, semi-finals—Dick Brown defeated A. G. Wallerstedt, 2 and 1; T. M. Barr defeated P. J. O'Malley, 2 and 1. Final—Barr defeated Brown, 2 and 1.

Third sixteen, semi-finals—C. T. McDonald defeated F. Brandon, 1 up; Larry Dean defeated William Bartholomew, 1 up, 19 holes. Final—Dean defeated McDonald 1 up.

Fourth sixteen, semi-finals—L. M. Weins defeated Dave Rosenberg, 2 and 1; Joe Guthrie defeated H. L. Morgan, 2 and 1. Final—Weins defeated Guthrie, 4 and 1.

Fifth sixteen, semi-finals—Dave Wilder defeated Mike Grezmak, 2 and 1; Jack Wohlgemuth defeated E. M. Josack, 4 and 3. Final—Wilder defeated Josack, 3 and 2.

Championship consolation semi-finals, finals—Joe Cutro defeated Mike Evans, 3 and 1; J. W. Platt defeated Dick Wessell, 2 and 1. Final—Platt defeated Cutro, 2 and 1.

European flyweight champion, in training at Gus Wilson's camp at Orangeburg, N. Y., for a series of battles in this country. He may cross the trail of Willie Davies, of Charleroi—and Willie has just whipped Frankie Genaro and Corp. Izzy Schwartz, both claimants of the world title.

INTERNATIONAL TILTS BEGIN

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 21.—(AP.)—The first of the International exhibition tennis matches, being played at the Los Angeles Tennis Club in conjunction with the Pacific Southwest Tennis championship tournament, yesterday brought together American, Japanese and British players.

The hardest-fought match of the opening day was the mixed doubles, in which Mrs. B. C. Covell, captain of the British Wightman Cup team, paired with M. W. Austin, also of England, defeated Johnny Doeg, Santa Monica, Cal., player, and Mary Greef, University of Southern California star. The score was 6-3, 8-6.

Berkely Bell, inter-collegiate champion, and Frank Shields, of New York, defeated Bunny Austin, British Davis Cup star, and John Olliff, English indoor champion, 11-9, 6-4.

Betty Nuthall, English star, and John Farquharson, of South Africa, came to grief at the hands of John Van Ryn and Midge Gladman, Santa Monica, in the mixed doubles, 6-4, 7-5.

Princeton, W. Va., High Wins Grid Tilt

PRINCETON, W. Va., Sept. 21.—(AP.)—Playing under floodlights on a new athletic field, the Princeton High School eleven opened its gridiron season last night by defeating the Oxley High squad, 13 to 7, in the first high school game played at night in West Virginia. All home games on the Princeton schedule are to be played at night.

Incidents in Barnum's Life Featured on Radio

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

DRAMATIC incidents in the life of P. T. Barnum, the greatest showman the world has known, will be given us tonight by the Lyric Challengers, WCAE at 8 o'clock.

The challenging incident in his life which will be dramatized this evening, deals with his sponsorship of Jenny Lind. The importation of the Swedish nightingale, as Barnum so aptly dubbed her, was an event so stupendous that it still has reverberations in the entertainment world.

Barnum challenged the world of art and music in his day; he risked his whole fortune to bring Jenny Lind to the United States. The thrill of this challenge and the success that resulted have been an inspiration to managers and artists ever since.

Rhapsodic variations on "La Paloma" and "When My Dreams Come True" will feature Phil Spitalny's concert over WCAE at 7 p. m.

"The Truth" will be given over KDKA at 10 by the Radio Guild, and at WJAS at 9:30 the Romany Pattern Orchestra will indulge in folk songs.

It is the usual Saturday evening with a great variety of entertainment, ranging from the light, popular music of the dance orchestra to heavier compositions by the General Electric group.

We Now Present

Glenn E. Riggs, announcer at KDKA, learned three things down on the farm. He learned to cut corn, milk the cow and gather eggs.

Very strange indeed, but Stockman Sam received a report from Mercer, Pa., that a prize rooster which held singing lessons at 4 o'clock every morning disappeared shortly after Mr. Riggs' arrival. Can it be that Glenn went to the farm for rest?

Making models is the hobby of Stanley Wadsworth, night operator at WCAE. Stanley is a dreamy sort of fellow with oodles of technical knowledge in his head. He says little but observes much.

MORE BONGS: The usual "there will be a brief pause for station announcement" was ommitted from local chain programs this week. In its place was a musical note, obtained from a specially designed four-note gong. The new stunt is infinitely more pleasing to the listener.

Maybe "Bud" Cooper isn't the busy man these days arranging for unique programs over KQV. "Bud" has some wonderfully brilliant ideas for fall programs and we just know that "Bud" will put them over big. The "Bow Wow Club" will have artists who have "gone to the dogs." They will bark until the small morning hours in a variety getup.

"The Truth"

This comedy of American life was first produced in Cleveland in October, 1906, and later it was played at the Criterion and Lyceum Theaters, New York City. It was also produced at the Comedy Theater, London, in April, 1907, and it was revived by Winthrop Ames at the Little Theater, New York, in April, 1914.

Becky's white lies and her husband's misunderstanding of the truth result in an estrangement. Fibs and other forms of untruth force both couples into a realization of actualities and bring about a reconciliation between Becky and her husband.

MARGIE NELSON

EARL MITCHELL

Earl Mitchell, organist of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church, who will be heard in a piano recital over KDKA tonight, has not missed a single service in the church since accepting his present position 10 years ago. Mr. Mitchell will take his place at the console tomorrow at 5 p. m., for the first fall vesper service, which KDKA will broadcast. Margie Nelson, blues singer, will be heard from KQV at 8:30 tonight.

Poisonous Plant

THE plant known as St. John's wort is poisonous to cattle and sheep that are white or partly white, due to the fact that the poison in the plant is effective only in light, and the light is screened out by colored matter in an animal's skin.

Lady Causes Commotion In Cabaret as She Sees Joe's Act

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

In the hold-up of the Casa Alvarado, Chicago night club, Detective Capt. Jim Courtney is shot and killed by Rico, Sam Vettori's gangster lieutenant. Sam is furious, fearing the consequences, but Rico, unafraid, calls Sam a coward and assumes his leadership. The gang gives Rico a banquet to celebrate his rise to power. When Tony Passa losing his nerve, attempts to squeal about the hold-up, he is shot dead by Rico. The latter, broadening his field, forces "Little Arnie" to give up a share of his gambling house profits. He also takes his woman, Blondy Belle. She tells him Arnie is cheating on the split. Rico, pleased with his power, resents the absence of one of his gangsters, Joe Massara, the dude. He finds him performing at a high-class night club with his girl, Olga Stassoff. Joe, fearing Tony's fate, is forced to fall in with Rico's underworld plans. Flaherty, a detective, arrives to interrupt the conference. Rico meets Blondy and hears more of Little Arnie's duplicity. She warns him to kill Arnie or get it himself. Alone, on the street, he is fired on from a car. He drops and receives only a flesh wound. His gang gathers and an underworld doctor arrives. With his gang, Rico, seeking revenge, forces his way into Little Arnie's place, trapping him and his hired gunmen. Little Arnie and his followers are run out of town by Rico, whose power now makes him famous in Little Italy. Rico is still more impressed with his own importance in the gang world, when he is visited by Pete Montana, powerful Chicago gang leader, who is feared in the whole city. Otero, Rico's loyal bodyguard, keeps an eye on the visitors. After Montana leaves, Rico realizes his power. Rico dines with the Big Boy, who tells him that Montana is through.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXVI

RICO, with the Big Boy's cigar still between his teeth, lay back in the taxi and stared out at the tangle of traffic on Michigan boulevard. Things were sure looking up! Five years ago he wasn't nobody to speak of; just a lonely yegg, sticking up chain-stores and filling stations. Chiggi had sure given him the right dope. He remembered one night in Toledo when he was pretty low. There was a blonde he used to meet and she had to have the coin on the nose. Well, he didn't have a red. He was just sitting there in Chiggi's thinking about the blonde, when Chiggi came over and said: "Listen, kid, you got big town stuff in you. What you want around here? Get somebody to stake you or hit the rods. Hell, don't be a piker." Well, Chiggi staked him, but he blew the stake on the blonde, oh, boy what a couple of days, and then he hit the rods with Otero. Little Italy sure looked good to them. They didn't have a good pair of pants between them, and a bowl of mulligan tasted better than the stuff he'd ate at the Big Boy's. Well, here he was riding taxis and hobnobbing with guys like James O'Doul, who paid one grand for a bunch of crockery. Yeah, here he was!

Rico saw nothing but success in the future. With the Big Boy behind him he couldn't be stopped, and when he once got some place he knew how to stay there. Play square with the guys that are square with you; the hell with everybody else.

Rico smoked his cigar slowly (he had six more of them in his pocket), and looked absently at the jam of traffic; taxis, big autos, huge double-decked buses, leaning as they turned the corners. Rico dropped the cigar butt out the window. Lying back in his seat he observed:

"And I thought Pete Montana was such a hell of a guy!"

Olga was only partly dressed when Joe burst in on her. She looked at him, startled. "My Lord," she said, "what makes you so pale, Joe?"

"Got any liquor?" demanded Joe.

Olga opened a drawer and handed him a flask. He tipped it up and took a long pull, then he stood with the flask in his hand staring at the wall.

"Joe," Olga insisted, "what's wrong with you?"

Joe came to himself, screwed the top on the flask, and handed it back to Olga.

"Boy, I got a shock," said Joe.

"Tell Olga all about it."

"Well," said Joe, "I was finishing up my Pierrot dance, see, and you know when it's dark and they got the spot on you, you can't see nothing. Well, I was circling the outside of the floor like I do before I take that last leap when some dame at a corner table gives a yell, a hell of a yell. Sibby hears the yell and switches on all the lights and here I am, right in front of a dame that looks like she's off her nut. She was standing up and she had her hands on the table and she was staring right at me. If I didn't feel funny, boy! Well, there was a guy with her and he kept asking her what was the matter, but she wouldn't say nothing. I thought she was gonna jump right on me, she looked so funny, yeah, that dame sure looked funny."

"Listen," she said, "you better lay off the liquor."

"No, straight," said Joe, "you know I kind of got the idea she recognized me or something, but, hell, I never seen her before. She's an old dame, about 40, and she's got peroxide hair. There was a guy with her, a nice-looking guy, and he kept saying, What's the matter, Nell,' but he couldn't get nothing out of her."

Olga laughed again.

"Well, this ain't nothing to write home about," she said. "I thought I was gonna get a thrill. We better change bootleggers, Joe."

"Aw, lay off," said Joe. "I'm telling you, you'd've got all the kick you're looking for if you'd heard that dame yell."

Joe got out the flask and took another pull at it before he answered her. The color had come back into his face now and he felt much better.

"Soon as the boss found out there was something wrong he came in and asked this dame if he could do anything for her. And she says, 'Yes, get me a taxi.' The guy with her says, 'What the devil, Nell.' And she says 'I want to go home.' So they went out. Boy, the way that dame looked at me, like I was, God, I don't know what!"

"Say, listen," said Olga, "you been hitting the pipe?"

"Aw, lay off," said Joe; "that dame's got something on her mind, see. She's got something on her mind."

Some one knocked. Olga called "Come in" and a waiter opened the door and bowed.

"Mr. Willoughby wants to know if he can bring the table in now, Miss Stassoff."

"Sure," said Olga, "bring it in."

"Yes, ma'am," said the waiter, then he cupped his hands and called down the corridor, "Allez!"

Joe lay down on the lounge and lit a cigaret. Olga went over to her dressing table, made up her face, and put on her Japanese kimono.

Two waiters came in, carrying a table; a third followed with a cloth and silver. When the table was set one of the waiters said:

"Sure," said Olga, "tell him to come right back."

"Shall we start to serve?"

"Yeah," said Olga, "right away."

When the waiters had gone Joe said:

"I'm getting fed up with this Willoughby guy. He's a dumb egg."

"Sure, he's dumb," said Olga, "but I don't hold that against him. What I like about that bird is that he don't get his hand stuck in his pocket when the boy comes around with the bill."

"He sure don't, that's a fact," said Joe, laughing. "Well, then don't be so particular," said Olga; "guys like him are few and far between."

Willoughby tapped lightly on the door and then came in. He was freshly shaven and he looked chubby and boyish.

Joe got up and shook hands with him. Olga said:

"Was you out front?"

"Yes," said Willoughby; "by the way, Joe, what was all the commotion?"

"See," said Joe, turning to Olga. "She thought I was making it up, Mr. Willoughby."

"No, he wasn't making it up," said Willoughby, serious. "I never heard such a scream in my life."

"Don't remind me," said Joe; "boy, my hair stood straight up."

A waiter came in carrying a wine bucket, followed by another waiter carrying the soup.

"Well," said Willoughby, "shall we monjay, as they say in France?"

"Oui, monsieur," said Olga.

"Sure," said Joe, "I'm ready for the feed-bag in any language."

"I hope you like this stuff," he said, "it's out of my own cellar."

"I'd like to sleep in that cellar," said Olga.

"Well," said Willoughby, "you have a standing invitation."

They ate in silence for a moment, then Joe said:

"Say, Mr. Willoughby, what you suppose was the matter with that dame?"

"I couldn't say."

Ann Marie Succeeds in Getting Job Through Jim's Influence

CHAPTER XXXII.

IF he had slapped her across the face Ann Marie couldn't have been more stunned and hurt.

"You mean you're through with me?" she asked, feeling as though her heart would burst. "You don't care about me—any more?"

He picked up his glass of orange juice, drained it, and set it down again.

"Well, to tell the truth, I'm not very crazy about you in your present mood," he said bluntly. "I've always been a free agent and it gets my goat to have you keep tabs on me!"

He drank the coffee she had made for him and picked up the morning paper.

"And you'd like to be a free agent again?" Ann Marie asked in a strangled voice. "You're tired of being engaged to me, aren't you?"

He did not answer.

Ann Marie stood, looking down at him for a moment more, and then went slowly out of the room.

She closed the door of it behind her, feeling exactly as if she were closing the door on all of her happiness.

Oh, what a fool she had been to think she could hold him just by coming here and taking care of him! What a fool she had been to think of marrying a man like him! A man so good-looking that no woman would ever let him alone. So wild about women, himself, that he never would tie himself down to one.

"I knew what he was like, right from the start," she told herself, thinking it all out in the quiet of her own little apartment, "and I should have put him out of my mind then."

"There's Jim now," she thought, and picked up her gloves and hand-bag.

But when she opened the door Neal stood outside in the dim little hallway. He was laughing and he held a pair of his trousers in his hands.

"Sore at me?" he asked.

For an instant Ann Marie was too amazed to answer him.

"It was you—You were angry with me!" she said finally.

She could hardly believe that he was not angry with her still. Why, not an hour ago he had told her by his silence that he was through with her. That he wanted to be what he called "a free agent" again ... And now here he was, behaving as if nothing very much had happened!

She couldn't begin to understand him, unless perhaps this was his way of patching up their quarrel.

"Well, if we're friends, I was going to ask you to do me a favor," he said to her, still in that half-laughing way. "I was going to ask you if you would press this pair of trousers for me."

Now, Ann Marie had never pressed a pair of trousers in her life. But she had seen Mrs. Leezy press trousers for her father and Howdy many a time. And she had a small electric iron in her little make-believe kitchen.

"All right. Give them to me," she said. She took them.

But as she did it, a bell rang in the room behind her, and she knew that the Goodwins had come for her.

"That must be Jim ringing the bell in the vestibule," she said, wondering what to do now. "I—I ought to go to lunch with him and his sister, Neal. He's trying to be nice to me. He's going to take me to some people who may give me a job. And you know it was you who asked Jim to help me out."

He took the trousers out of her hand.

"You won't have time to do these," he added. "I'd have the tailor down the street press them, but I owe him so much now that I'm steering clear of him ...

"Goodby, have a good time."

He drew her close to him and kissed her.

"Hurry back," he said.

She was half-way down the stairs when he called her back to him.

He was still holding the trousers in his hands, and he was looking first at them and then at her with an odd little twisted smile on his face.

"Sweetheart, I've got to have these pressed," he said, "and I'm flatter than linoleum. My mother usually sends me a check about this time of the month, but it's late this month. . . . Could you let me take a fiver?"

The words were not out of his mouth before Ann Marie had a ten-dollar bill out of her shabby little bag and into his outstretched hand.

"Good Lord, I never thought I'd come to this!" he groaned in a comical sort of way as he took it. "Borrowing money from my girl!"

. . . "'My girl,'" Ann Marie repeated his words to herself as she ran down the stairs to meet the Goodwins. "He said 'my girl!'"

That meant that he had forgiven her and taken her back—and she was gloriously happy once again!

Jim was waiting in the vestibule for her, and through the lace door curtains Ann Marie could see his car standing at the curb.

There was a girl in the back seat. She leaned forward eagerly when Jim and Ann Marie came out into the sunny street.

"My sister, Janet," Jim said, introducing her, "Janet, this is Ann Marie Macy. I have to call her 'Miss Macy,' but she'll probably not mind if you call her 'Ann Marie.'"

"I would love it!" declared Ann Marie, settling herself on the soft velvet-covered cushions of the gerat closed car with its shining windows and silver-and-crystal fittings.

Jim got in beside her.

"We're going to the Plaza," he said in his quiet, pleasant way as the car slid away from the curb.

The Plaza!. . .Ann Marie looked down at her shabby gloves, her shabbier handbag and her old blue dress that had been steamed and pressed times without number.

She looked at Janet Goodwin's black velvet suit that looked as if it were brand new. At the bunch of creamy fresh gardenias pinned upon her young flat breast. At her immaculate cream-colored gloves. At the string of tiny seed-pearls around her neck.

"She makes me look like something out of a second-hand store," thought Ann Marie bitterly. "And I'll look worse than ever in a place like the Plaza!"

She began to wish that she had never said she would come with them today—and then all at once she forgot her discomfort and her shyness. For Janet had begun to talk to her in the easiest friendliest way, and she laid one of her beautifully-gloved hands over Ann Marie's as she talked.

"Jim says you've come up here all alone!" she said, "and I do think that's the bravest thing I ever heard of! To leave your home and your family and everything just to come up here to study art! I think you're positively wonderful!"

She talked on and on in her young excited breathless voice, with her dark eyes snapping and her face aglow with 19-year-old interest and enthusiasm.

Ann Marie only half-listened to her. She leaned back in her seat enjoying the sight of the crowds of Fifth avenue, the sunlight, the stir of spring in the air and the warm comfort of being with two people who liked her and didn't mind showing it. Two people who had gone out of their way to be kind to her for no reason at all—except that they did like her.

The Plaza was too wonderful for words.

It took Ann Marie's breath away . . . The big dining room with its deep-piled carpet. The music playing softly. The velvety roses on every table. The beautifully dressed women and men, smoking and eating. The silver-covered dishes full of rich and unfamiliar food. Janet smiling and nodding at people here and there . . . Jim on the other side of their own table, with eyes only for Ann Marie.

"And now to business!" he said in a big-brotherly voice when lunch was over.

They got back into the car, dropped Janet at Forty-second street, and went on downtown to the advertising agency.

Up, up, up in a crowded elevator to the very top of a tall building they went. Then down a long hall to an office where many men and women were at work at flat-topped desks . . . Then into a smaller office where a generously-built, handsome woman of middle age got up from a big shining mahogany desk to greet them.

"Miss Hogan, this is the young lady I've been telling you about," Jim said, and laid Ann Marie's package of her own pictures on the big shining desk. "I know you'll be able to find something for her to do. Something that she'll like to do—and something that will pay her well."

Miss Hogan flashed a smile at him from her bright gray eyes. She had a lovely smile and big square white teeth.

"And now I've got to be going," Jim said, turning to Ann Marie. "The car will be waiting downstairs for you."

A hard hand grip and he was gone.

At 4 o'clock Ann Marie came walking out of the building as if she were walking on stars.

She had a job and the promise of $30 a week salary to start with! Moreover, Miss Hogan had told her that she was good! . . . Her little pictures of flappers in smart dresses were "adorable," she had said.

"They're different. They're not the same old style pictures we've been seeing in fashion sheets for the past five years," she had told Ann Marie. "You be here tomorrow morning at half past eight, and I'll be here to start you off right!"

The sound of her business-like rich voice still sounded in Ann Marie's ears . . . It seemed to her like the very voice of Success!

"And pretty soon I'll have enough money to get into a night class at some good art school," she thought as the great smooth riding car bore her back to Susquehanna Hall. "God bless Jim Goodwin for all of it."

The windows were open to the soft spring dusk . . . Had she left them open, she wondered.

Then she saw that some one was in the room.

A slender plume of blue cigaret smoke rose above one end of the day-bed which had been dragged out of the dressing-closet. From the other end swung a foot, and from the tip of that foot dangled a Turkish slipper! . . . She knew that slipper! She knew whose slipper that was.

Alice had come to town!

SUN-TELEGRAPH

Stock Exchange Topics

Impression That Broad Bull Market Exists Far From Right.

SPECTACULAR strength in the pivotal issues, particularly those which find reflection in the averages, has tended right along to give the impression that a board bull market has been in progress. Yet nothing could be further from the truth, as a close study of the situation reveals. Certainly those who have been trading in the few selected stocks such as Consolidated Gas, Columbia Gas, American & Foreign Power, Commercial Solvents and American Telephone, undoubtedly have that impression. But the less fortunate who have been long on such recognized leaders as General Motors, Steel, Radio and a host of others that have not fared so well in the last fortnight have an entirely different opinion.

Inasmuch as the loan ratio, compiled by the Stock Exchange on the basis of September 1, stock values and loans comes to hand almost three weeks late, too much importance, at least in this instance, cannot be attached to the relations of these two items in its bearing on the present market situation. On that date the ratio was 8.79 per cent or about .08 below the August 1 figure. But since the beginning of the month, security prices have not gone any higher, in fact they are probably somewhat lower, while in the interval loans have been mounting rapidly. Perhaps the ratio, if compiled at the moment, would not make quite so satisfactory a showing.

IGNORING the reactionary tone in the general list, Power and Light shares proceeded to push ahead aggressively through the morning. Leadership remained vested in Columbia Gas and Electric, that issue staging a further spectacular rise to new record levels, with the buying reported quite as impressive as it had been since the beginning of the week. As pointed out previously the meager floating supply of utility shares is in a large way accountable for their ready response to buying operations, yet there is no denying the fact that evidence is plain of more or less competitive demand for many of the larger company shares.

Evidently Charles E. Mitchell, head of the National City Bank, now the world's largest institution in that field, has been experiencing something of a change of views recently. At any rate, Mr. Mitchell, preparing to go abroad, expressed the opinion today that "There is nothing to worry about in the country's financial situation." He put forth the same view relative to brokers' loans. Yet Wall street recalled that he was among those quite perturbed over the matter of speculative absorption of credit last spring and was at that time one of the strongest advocates for higher Reserve Bank rates. Now, however, he finds brokers' loans reflect in a measure new methods of financing business expansion.

IN ABOUT a month directors of Pennsylvania meet for dividend action. Gossip in the financial district is that there is a possibility of not only an increase in the cash dividend to $5 a share per annum, but also that some valuable subscription rights may be decided upon. Earnings thus far this year have been showing substantial expansion over the same period of last year and estimates are that the road may earn as much as $10 a share this year. With such results, it is argued that something better for stockholders would be justified.

Estimates have been made that sales of Kroger Grocery this year will reach approximately $300,000,000. This would compare with $207,372,550 in 1928. The stock has been quite inactive for some time, but important market interests insist that accumulation has been in progress and that this buying is nearly completed. If this is correct, the stock should act better in the near future.

National City Head Says Credit Is O. K.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—"Business and financial outlook throughout the country is good," said Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of National City Bank, as he sailed on the liner Olympic late last night.

"Although somewhat spotty in places," he said, "there is nothing to worry about in the credit situation. I do not think there is any need to worry about brokers loans, in line with general expansion of business and business credit together with expansion of financing, I think the rate of increase in brokers loans is altogether proportional."

Super-Power Firm To Increase Stock

BALTIMORE, Sept. 21.—Stockholders of International Super-Power Corporation have approved recommendation of directors to increase the authorized stock to 2,000,000 shares, no par value, from 500,000, and also ratify proposal to extend the powers of the corporation by removing restrictions upon the acquisicion of securities with respect to the percentage of the assets of the corporation, which may consist of securities of specified kinds and with respect to the earnings required to be shown by the business in whose securities the corporation may invest.

Dodge Bros. Report Near Export Record

DETROIT, Sept. 21.—Dodge Bros.' export shipments of trucks and commercial cars from plants in the United States and Canada totaled 8,163 units in the first eight months this year, a new high record, and 11 per cent increase over the same period last year.

Pettibone Shows Increase in Sales

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Pettibone-Mulliken Company reports total sales of $3,092,912 for nine months ended July 31 compared to sales of about $2,805,000 for the Predecessor Company in the corresponding period a year ago.

NORTHWESTERN CUTS DOWN CHARGES

Completion of Refunding Plan Will Reduce Fixed Items by $556,000 Yearly

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—With the completion of refunding to be done through $72,335,000 of 20-year 4¾ per cent convertible bonds offered to common and preferred stockholders, Chicago and North Western Railway's fixed charges will be reduced $566,538 annually in comparison with the interest on the $69,270,000 debt that will be retired by the financing.

This reduction in fixed charges is equivalent to 35 cents a share on 1,584,449 shares of common stock.

Of the proceeds from this financing, $24,084,000 will be used to retire obligations of the North Western maturing up to June 1, 1930, and $45,186,000 will be advanced to the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railway to pay off that amount of its bonds falling due on or before June 1, 1930.

At the end of last year, the North Western had a funded debt of $330,621,390. Stock (preferred and common) outstanding at the close of last year was $180,840,035.

OWNS OMAHA STOCK

As of December 31, last, the North Western owned 279,260 common and preferred shares of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha Railway, or about 93 per cent of the 298,189 shares outstanding. Prior to an exchange offer of the North Western in the fore part of the 1925 on the basis of five shares of North Western common for seven shares of Omaha common and three shares of North Western common for two shares of Omaha preferred, the parent company owned slightly over 50 per cent of the Omaha's total capital stock.

OMAHA'S DEBT

When the full exchange of these stocks is made there will be outstanding about $160,415,664 of North Western common as compared with $158,444,915 at the last year end. The merger will reduce the par amount of stock of the two companies by about $15,000,000.

The Omaha had an outstanding debt at the end of 1928 of $48,663,600. All of this except some equipment trust notes will be retired through the proceeds of the new North Western convertible issue.

STOCK CAPITAL

Considering the Omaha and the North Western as a system, it will have a funded debt held by the public at the end of this year of around $338,000,000, including the new financing, the $8,775,000 of equipment trust notes recently sold by the North Western and making allowance for annual payments on equipment trust notes. With exchange of stock between the two roads completely effected, the North Western would have outstanding $182,810,784 of stock. Such a system would thus have a total capitalization of $520,810,784, of which only about 35 per cent would be stock.

CHANGES SET-UP

Such a capital setup is not desirable and the new convertible bond issue is intended to correct the capital structure materially. The new bonds are convertible into common stock of the North Western at 105 on or after July 1, 1930, and on or before July 1, 1940. If and when these bonds are converted into common stock, outstanding capital stock of the company will be increased by $68,890,976 and the funded debt reduced by $72,335,000.

On completion of such conversion, and still considering the North Western on a system basis, there would then be outstanding $265,665,000 (approximately) of bonds and $251,701,760 in stock, not allowing for any further financing or for reduction in equipment trust certificates outstanding.

DIVIDEND OUTLOOK

It appears quite probable that the common stock of the North Western will be put on a $5 annual basis at the dividend meeting in November. In the 12 months ended July 31, North Western earned about $8.30 a share on its common stock. August earnings are expected to show a substantial gain over a year ago. With good weather in November and December, as much as $9 a share of direct earnings is likely to be shown for the year.

The Omaha road for the past two years has been showing a deficit after fixed charges but this year for the first seven months net operating income is $763,491 ahead of a year ago. It appears likely that some surplus after fixed charges will be shown for the year, as compared with a deficit of $594,595 last year.

Price & Whitely Gain Two New Companies

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The Price and Whitely Trading Corporation and associates have obtained control of two industrial companies. Names of these companies were not revealed. L. S. Critchell, vice president, stated that profit from underwritings and syndicates as well as interest on funds loaned should total about $600,000 gross before deductions during the first month of operations. After federal taxes and preferred dividends, this is equal to 52 cents a share on the 856,000 common shares.

N.Y. Exchange Rules On United Common

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The committee on securities of the New York Stock Exchange has ruled that contracts for United Gas Improvement Company cumulative preferred and common stock when issued must be settled by September 27. Seven stock clearing corporations will hold intermediate clearings in the United Gas Improvement when issued common stock September 23 and final clearance on September 26.

Ratio of Loans To Values Off For Month

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Total borrowings by members of the New York Stock Exchange against stock collateral on September 1 amounted to 8.79 per cent of the market value of all listed shares, compared with 8.87 per cent on August 1.

Shares listed on the stock exchange totaled $89,668,276,854 on September 1, comparing with $84,232,792,083 on August 1. During the same period loans to brokers increased $407,825,132 to $7,881,619,426, a new high record.

HOME PRODUCTS SHOWS GAIN OVER 1928

Profit Ratio Keeps Pace With Increase in Sales; Now Facing Best Season

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Report of American Home Products for six months ended June 30, showing net profit of $2.67 a share on the 599,000 shares of capital stock outstanding, against $2.52 in the like period last year, was consistent with the upward trend in earnings maintained by the company since its organization.

Company's business is the manufacture and sale of a wide variety of nationally advertised drugs, cosmetics and patented chemical preparations.

The gain in earnings was due mainly to the large increase in sales. In the first six months of the current year, sales totaled $7,015,756, against $5,408,188 in the corresponding period of 1928 and $11,933,587 in the full year 1928.

TREND SHARPLY UPWARD

As the last half year's sales and earnings usually show an improvement over those for the first six months, results for the current twelve-month period should be well over $5 a share, against the $4.87 a share reported in 1928.

Progress made by the company since its organization is indicated by the following table:

Year:	Sales	Net Income
1929 (six mos.)	$7,015,756	$1,597,693
1928	11,933,587	2,917,135
1927	8,068,855	1,962,918
1926	4,432,807	1,109,083

DRUG COMBINATION

American Home Products was organized in 1926 by Sterling Products and Household Products interests to acquire the Wyeth Chemical Co. and affiliated companies. American Home Products started business with the manufacture and sale of the wide variety of medicinal preparations of the Wyeth Chemical Co., in addition to Petrolagar, acquired with the Deshell Laboratories; Hill's Cascara Quinine, which had been produced by the Larned Co., and Freezone, Espoonade, Outgro, Neet, Hair Groom and Orchard White, acquired from Edward Wesley & Company, a partnership.

Company later purchased for cash the A. S. Boyle Co., manufacturing Old English Floor Wax, polishers, varnish removers and allied products. Home Products' lines were further diversified by the purchase for stock and cash of the Oxzyne Co., manufacturers of cosmetics and toilet preparations.

STOCK INCREASES

Through the sale of 73,000 additional shares of American Home Products stock, the company obtained funds to purchase the International Chemical Company, whose plants, located in England, manufacture proprietary medicines under the trademark of "Bisurated Magnesia." Last acquisition was that of the Kolynos Company, producing Kolynos dental cream and Kolynos liquid.

In the course of these acquisitions, stock outstanding was increased to the present 599,000 shares from 300,000. Earnings gains have more than kept pace with the increase in the number of shares, due not only to sales gains, but also to the favorable terms on which acquisitions were made.

MONTHLY DIVIDENDS

In the first year of operations, American Home Products showed $3.69 a share on the original 300,000 shares, and approximately the same share earnings were reported in 1927, although the number of shares outstanding had been increased to 534,000. The higher share earnings of $4.87 were achieved in spite of an increase in the number of shares to 599,000.

Cash dividends are paid monthly at the rate of $3.60 annually. Company paid 20 cents monthly from May, 1926, to April, 1928, when the rate was raised to 25 cents. In June, 1929, first 30-cent payment was made and has been maintained since that time.

The company has approximately 400,000 shares of stock, authorized but unissued, available for further acquisitions. It has no funded debt and no preferred.

Legal Notices 107

NOTICE OF MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.
To the stockholders of the American Window Glass Company:

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the American Window Glass Company will be held on Tuesday, October 15, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon, at the office of the company, 1616 Farmers Bank Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for the purpose of amending Article II of the by-laws of the Corporation so that thereafter the same shall read as follows:

All the powers of the corporation shall be vested in a board of nine (9) directors to be elected at the annual meeting of the corporation on the third (3rd) Tuesday in October in each year. The said directors shall be divided into three (3) classes, and at the anual election in the year 1929 one-third (⅓) shall be elected for one (1) year, one-third (⅓) for two (2) years and one-third (⅓) for three (3) years respectively. At the annual election in 1930 and at all ensuing elections for directors the stockholders shall elect only the number of directors necessary to take the place of those whose term of office shall then expire, and such directors shall be elected for the term of three (3) years, and said directors shall serve for the term for which they are elected and until their successors are chosen.

And for the further purpose of electing nine directors, that is to say, if the above amendment is approved, then to elect three directors for one year, three directors for two years, and three directors for three years respectively, and if it is not approved, then to elect nine directors for the ensuing year; and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

W. M. BONESTEEL,
Secretary.

Private Sale of Real Estate for Payment Of Debts

To all heirs, devisees, legatees, creditors and other persons interested in said estate:

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Roy McKenna Sullivan, administrator, is filed in the office of the clerk of the court praying for an order of sale of the real estate of the decedent situate in the Eighteenth Ward, formerly Thirty-eighth Ward, of the City of Pittsburgh, County of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania, being lot numbered thirty (30), in Thomas S. Maple's Plan of "Maple Vale," as recorded in the Recorder's Office of Allegheny County, in Plan Book, Vol. 12, pages 10 and 11, and bounded and described as follows:

Beginning on the westerly side of Estella, formerly Howard avenue, at a point distant forty-eight (48) feet southwardly from the southwest corner of Estella avenue and Michigan, formerly Eugenia street and at the dividing line between lots numbered twenty-nine (29) and thirty (30) in said plan; thence southwardly along the line of Estella avenue twenty-four (24) feet to the dividing line between lots numbered thirty (30) and thirty-one (31) in said plan, thence westwardly between lots twenty-nine (29) and thirty-one (31) in said plan and preserving the same width of twenty-four (24) feet throughout, one hundred (100) feet to an alley twenty (20) feet wide.

That there is erected on said premises a two-story frame dwelling house, known as and numbered 804 Estella street and an iron garage at private sale to Alois S. Gruber and Sarah D. Gruber, his wife, free and clear of all incumbrances for the sum of thirty-five hundred ($3,500.00) dollars for the payment of the decedent's debts.

The terms of sale to be one hundred ($100.00) dollars upon the execution of the agreement of sale and thirty-four hundred ($3,400.00) dollars in cash upon delivery of deed.

The court will be asked to make a decree of sale on the 19th day of October, 1929, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., Eastern Standard time, when higher offers will be considered and exceptions or objections to the proposed sale will be heard.

BUGS BAER Says

"Bugs" Baer

BY the time this is printed, the occupation of the Rhine will be over. It will mark the finish of a war which ended a dozen years ago.

We have always wondered how a city looked during a military occupation. We got the chance to see in Frankfort-on-the-Main in 1926.

It's just one of those things. No thrills, no kick. Just French and English soldiers strolling up and down the avenue. The corpulent citizens paid no more attention to them than a hobo does to a help wanted ad.

Now, they've yanked the soldiers out. But there will never be peace in Europe until they pull the statues down.

One peculiarity about Europe is the number of statues which hate each other. We first noticed it in Trafalgar Square after piping Lord Nelson pointing a tough finger in the direction of France. Maybe, it was Spain. Anyway, that finger is a perpetual challenge to the pointee.

In Frankfort, there is a pip of a replica of Bismarck on a big mechanical hoss, which seems to be galloping toward France. And Bizzy is pointing a corragated iron finger over the Rhine.

In Coblenz, where the Moselle joins the Rhine, is a bronze statue of William the Great, one of the famous ancestors of Willian the What.

And this statue is doing its share to stir up trouble with that hostile military index finger. It looks toward the channel ports with an aroma of military ambition that would start a skirmish in a junkyard.

Spain, Italy, Russia, Austria, Poland and even little Switzerland, all have their favorite heroic groups of pointing sharpshooters.

We do not say that these famous bronze works should be actually pulled down and used for railroad bumpers.

But we do think that it would help European goodwill and indemnities if they were compelled to point in another direction.

At the next meeting of the community diplomats, we suggest that, if the sword can be beaten into the plowshare, the hostile statue can be made into a weather vane.

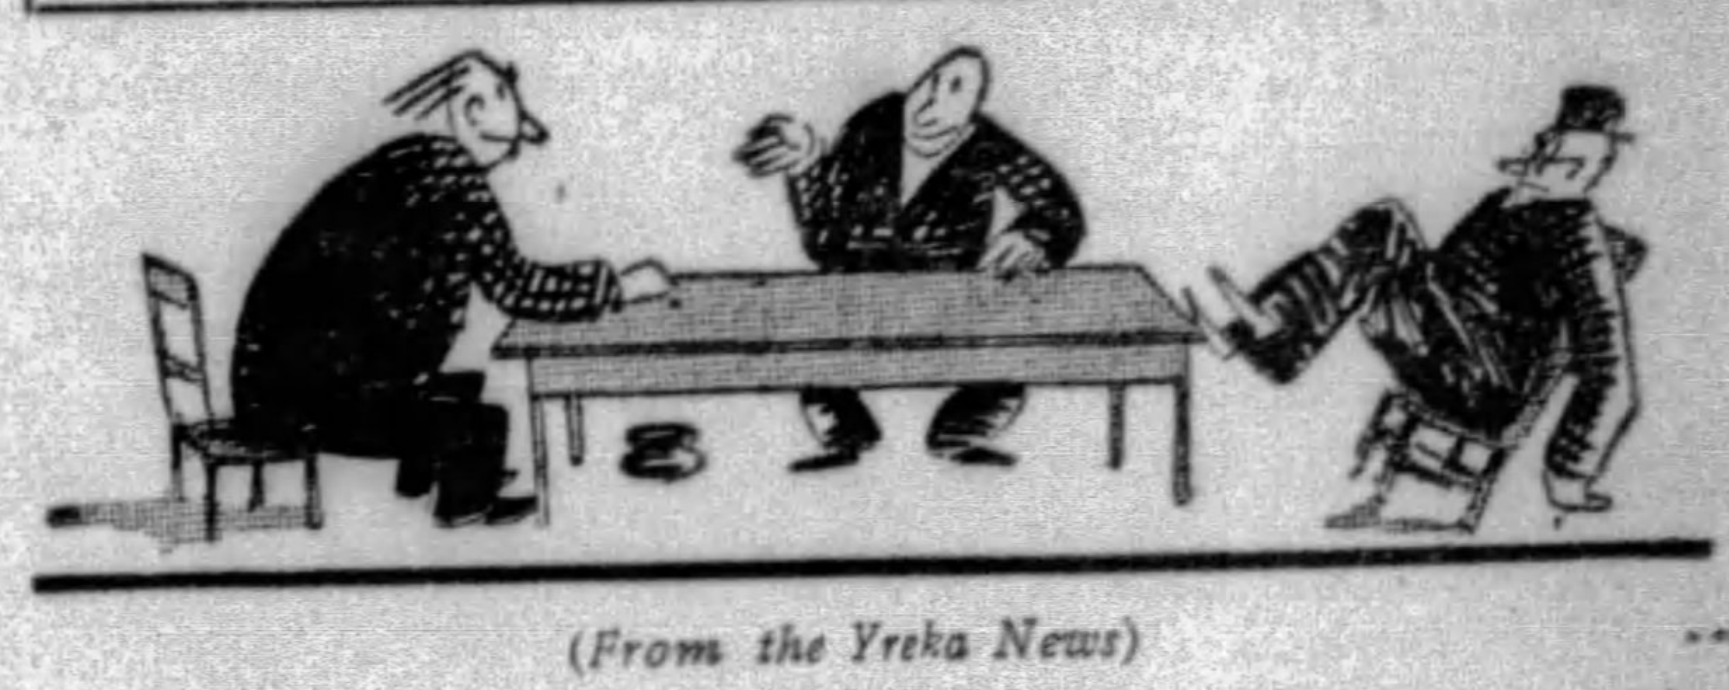
HOW THE TORCH BEARERS SPEND THEIR LONG EVENINGS



(From the Yreka News)

The City Council, after a discussion last night of minor matters, drifted into a subject that engaged their attenion for the remainder of the evening.

Beer, the home made variety, was given a pro and con hearing, with opinions offered by the council as to the best ways to make it, preserve it and keep it free from being drank too suddenly by the thirsty.

Each councilman had a different idea, but there was consensus on the subject that the home brew should be left alone for at least three months after bottling. It was admittedly a problem though as to how to keep good brew for so long during warm weather. It is easier to do it in the Autumn.

City Councilman Herzog declared that two eggs should be dropped into each batch for the purpose of clarifying. It had the same effect, he said, as eggs dropped into coffee.

Control of City Council By Mayor Possibility

Assuming that Republican nomination is tantamount to election and that official count will not change the unofficial tabulation of the vote cast in the recent primary Pittsburgh Council will have two new members in Clifford B. Connelley and Michael Muldowney—"Mike," as he is familiarly known. Muldowney's future incumbency is predicated on the possibility of the official count confirming his unofficial lead of 237 votes over Councilman P. J. McArdle, veteran member of the city legislature, one of the original "nine." In addition there will be a vacancy to be filled should Daniel Winters be elected to the position of controller.

Vacancies in Council are filled through a vote of members of that body and the mayor, each having one vote. Conceding the election of Muldowney and the election of Winters as controller, hence his resignation from Council, the person selected as his successor will be a supporter of the policies of Mayor Kline, if political auguries are reliable. This is assured by the division. There will be eight members of Council and the mayor to vote. Counting Muldowney, four of the eight members will be those of the Kline "slate" victorious in the recent primary. These, with the vote of Mr. Kline, can elect a candidate suitable to them.

This is mere speculation, of course, but it presents the possibility of Council losing its independence through control of the executive office. That is the worst view that can be taken of the matter. A more idealistic one is the vision of Council and the administration working in harmony, the legislative branch in sympathy with the executive's plans for the government and betterment of the city. In any event, "control" of Council, should it be attempted by the mayor, will give the public one pair of shoulders upon which to place all responsibility.

Then there is the possibility of Council undergoing stimulation through the injection of new blood. Mr. Connelley is known as a high type of man. At present librarian of the North Side Carnegie Library, he has had large educational and executive experience, having formerly been state commissioner of labor, dean of the School of Industries, Carnegie Institute of Technology, and consulting supervisor of the industrial schools of the public school system. He is member of engineering and educational societies and is interested in movements for the betterment of society.

Mr. Muldowney is experienced in legislative matters, being at present a member of the State Legislature. He is a business man, educated in parochial schools and Holy Ghost College, now Duquesne University. He is unmarried and his friends do not resent the fact that he is a Sohoan who plays golf.

They, Too, Serve

Sad Case of Poor Husband.

Some men have made courageous efforts to further science.

Consider the husband, for instance, who trails his wife on a shopping tour, and actually observes the stylish stout in the process of selecting a gown or a coat.

The man, nervous and ill at ease, sits on a frail chair in a labyrinth of mirrors. He lights a cigaret and doesn't know where to toss the match. But he does LEARN about women. He sees the elegant manikin, tall and haughty, parade before his wife. And he observes the illusion take root in his wife's mind. He makes a mental note to the effect that his wife is now convinced beyond all logic that SHE will look like the manikin if she can have the same draperies. The wife is trapped. Her mind is set like concrete.

The husband can fuss and fume to himself. He can only reach the conclusion that Congress will never remedy the deplorable condition by deporting all pretty manikins.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

ALL your life you have followed the plan not to go in debt for anything. You say you live on a cash basis.

You have carried this to the extent that you have never obligated yourself for payments on property or other possessions which might be valuable to you.

You think it to your credit that you never went in debt.

But wasn't your principal reason that you did not want to make denials necessary to save and pay installments on a home or other property?

You sought to avoid circumstances that might curtail your spending money on the pleasures you may enjoy, at the time you wished to enjoy them.

If you have the pride to try to be self-supporting to the end of your days you may come to regret your course.

It may seem fine to you to go through life with as little care and as few restrictions on your spending as possible.

But it might be better to go in debt for something of value in order to curb your unnecessary expenditures.

It may be the only way in which you will ever save anything.

If this is true, you better go into debt.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

WE'VE coined some great expressions since we started flying.

"AIR-MINDED" That's one of them. Clicks, doesn't it? AIR-MINDED as against EARTH-MINDED. People who think in terms of air—the speed of air, the freedom of air, the thrill of air. THE INTERNATIONALISM OF AIR, as against people who think in terms of earth—the security of earth—the provincialism of THEIR LITTLE SECTION OF EARTH.

AIR-MINDED—that's more than a technical term that goes with a new machine. That's a psychological term that goes with a new era of human development.

People who live part of the time in the air, who use the air as a common highway, are going to be very different humans from those who live all of their time on the earth.

They're going to think differently about time and speed, about risk and pain, about homes and jobs and families and nations. They're going to think differently about themselves and about this swift passage which men call life.

If life for you has meant the limited experience within a radius of 50 miles, you're bound to think of it in one way. You're bound to have nations and laws and interests adjusted to that 50-mile radius. You'll see everything from a Close Up.

But if life means San Francisco at breakfast and New York at midnight, you'll certainly change your scale of values. If Paris is as much your neighbor as Mrs. Jones, you can't be bothered by worrying about what time Tilly Jones comes home at night or whether Annie Jones' hair is bleached. You'll have a Paris-Shanghai radius instead of a Brownsville radius. And it will inevitably make you more tolerant and elastic.

YOU'LL GET A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF HUMAN NATURE AND OF YOUR OWN IMPORTANCE—mighty healthy experiences, both of 'em.

AIR-MINDED—all the history of human development lies in that phrase.

Life drying off on a sunny beach, breathing half water, half air, gradually losing its scales and fins—

Life living wholly in a cave, drowning in water, forgetting that it ever had gills—

Life moving from a cave into a tent, from a tent into a town, living wholly on earth, thinking that earth was the end—

And then, little by little, dreaming about something freer than earth—dreaming its way up from the earth—inventing its way up from the earth—lifting its way up from the earth into the air, as it had lifted its way up from the water on to the earth.

Life coming up—water—earth—AIR.

Bible Passages

The Famine Beginneth

(Genesis 41; 47-57)

AND in the seven plenteous years the earth brought forth by handfuls.

And he gathered up all the food of the seven years, which were in the land of Egypt, and laid up the food in the cities: the food of the field, which was round about every city, laid he up in the same.

And Joseph gathered corn as the sand of the sea, very much until he left numbering; for it was without number.

And unto Joseph were born two sons before the years of famine came, which Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah, priest of On, bare unto him.

And Joseph called the name of the firstborn Manasseh: for God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my father's house.

And the name of the second called he Ephraim: For God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction.

And the seven years of plenteousness, that was in the land of Egypt, were ended.

And the seven years of dearth began to come, according as Joseph had said: and the dearth was in all lands; but in all the land of Egypt there was bread.

And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread: and Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do.

And the famine was over all the face of the earth: And Joseph opened all the storehouses, and sold unto the Egyptians; and the famine waxed sore in the land of Egypt.

And all the countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all the lands.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

I DON'T see why there ain't more funny stories about amateur detectives. Detectiving is a funny business anyhow, and most detectives is amateurs. But when these correspondence school detectives that are just doing their work for their diploma get to flashing their tin stars around at a funeral or something, it ought to be right amusing.

Anyway, there was one that was kinda cracked on detecting crime, and he walked in at the police station when a big murder mystery was getting the police baffled some more. He says he can solve the mystery, and the chief says go ahead. So he says, "Well, you see, this here deceased was killed in the bathroom, wasn't he?"

"Yep, that's how it seems."

"And he was undressed when found?"

"Absolutely."

"Well, I been looking into the case a little, and I have reconstructed the crime in great detail. This guy was taking a bath, of course."

"Maybe so. That's what we figured."

"Well, he was in the bathtub, and two burglars enters the house. Out jumps the guy from his tub, and being unafraid, as I happen to know he was, he pulls a gun or a knife out of his hip pocket like this——"

"Yes, but here, young man! He hadn't any clothes on. We agreed to that. How could he pull a weapon out of his pocket?"

The amateur detective got up. "Well, gents," he says, "I see you don't want the mystery of this here crime solved. You're just looking for an argument, and you ain't going to get it out of me."

THE RELATIVITY OF TRUTH

By Archibald Henderson

THERE is a certain magic about science which makes it mysterious and wonderful. The very thought of knowledge—definitive, complete, all-embracing—introduces the idea of the divine. Science really means the profession of knowing. The passion for knowing things is the most powerful of all the passions.

This ineradicable longing to be convinced, this desire to arrive at the truth, has been responsible for some of the greatest revolutions in human history. This is true of art, of philosophy, of religion, of every department of human thought and emotion.

We all like to think of truth as eternal—applicable yesterday, today and forever. But it is a truism, in the realm of art no less than in the realm of science, that truth, so-called, does not have an indefinite lease on life. Times, conditions, customs, morals all change; and we change with and are changed in them. Ibsen says somewhere that a "truth was so hoary with age that it was in a fair way to become a lie."

How do we know that the truth here may not be a falsehood in Tokio?

We speak of the force of gravitation—as if it were a constant thing, the same here, there, and everywhere. But of course that is not a correct statement. A pinch of earth may weigh one ounce on the surface of the earth; it may weigh a ton on the surface of some one of the very remote heavenly bodies.

The physical and mechanical laws are believed in by us—as a working hypothesis—to be the same throughout the universe. The law governing electrons inside the atom is the exact analogy of Newton's law of universal gravitation—electrons repel each other directly as the product of the charges and inversely as the square of the distance. But what law holds inside the nucleus? We do not know. What laws hold on Orion, or Antares, or Vega? We do not know. Ibsen says somewhere: "Who can guarantee me that on Mars two and two do not make five?"

The relativity of truth, the variability of knowledge; these are merely limitations of the human machine and of the human spirit. The simplest of all mathematical conceptions are the point and the line. The point is mere position: without length, breadth or thickness. Try to draw a point and you will meet defeat: any point you indicate is so much matter, white chalk on a black board, black lead on white paper.

A straight line is defined, often, as having the same direction throughout its entire extent, and also as having no breadth or thickness. Try to draw one, and you will lay a streak of material particles of ink upon the surface of a white paper.

We used to think of a light-ray as the only true straight line in nature. But under the investigations of both Newton and Einstein, that old truth has become a lie. A light-ray is subject to gravitation, and deviates under the influence of a powerful gravitational force.

As each old truth is exposed, a newer, better truth takes its place. Always we are moving toward more precise information, more exact knowledge. We use what we call truths as long as they will work, as long as they will "deliver the goods." They must meet the pragmatic test. As soon as we find the old truths do not work, we ruthlessly scrap them for more refined truths, more accurate measurements, which give us a closer approximation to reality.

One of Ibsen's characters moves forward on the great adventure in pursuit of reality because he has found that, for him, "the old beauty is no longer beautiful, the new truth no longer true." We are all in search of newer, better, truer truths. Science gives us the truest of all truths.

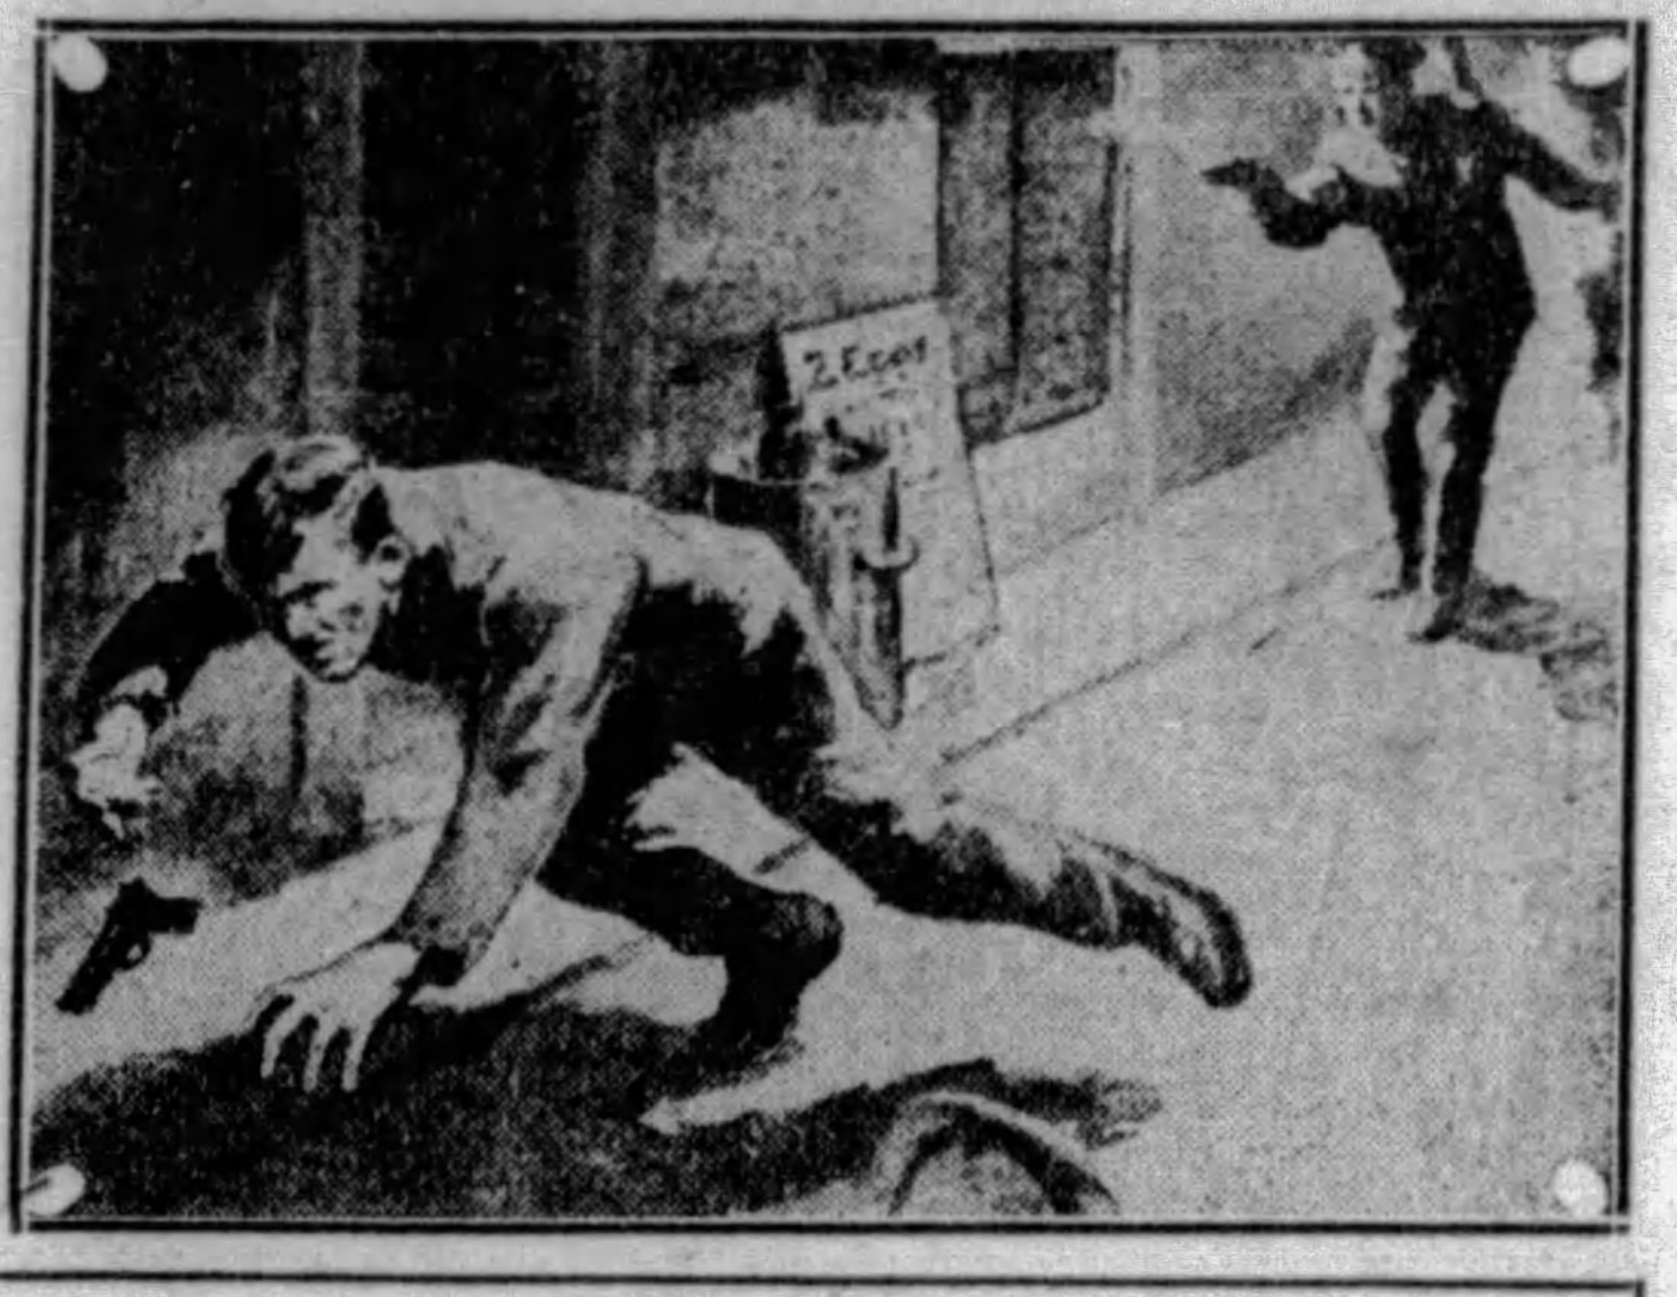
He Was Dead

But He Came Back and Talked.



"A PISTOL CRACKED—A GANGSTER FELL."

Some first-class advertising man devised this picture to advertise the fact that the great chemical firm, Parke, Davis & Co., manufactures Adrenalin.

This picture illustrates something that actually happened.

As he fell, a policeman examining him was told: "Quick, get all he knows before he goes," meaning get INFORMATION from him.

His heart had stopped, and he really was "dead" as we understand that word.

But an ambulance arrived, the doctor injected a dose of Adrenalin into the muscle of the gangster's heart, and life came back.

His eyes opened and he "lived" for three hours and is said to have given to the police information that caused the arrest of other criminals.

Very mysterious is that Adrenalin, made from Adrenalin glands taken from the body of an animal. Those glands, included among the numerous and mysterious "Endocrine" glands, regulate the flow of blood and therefore the life in your body.

With Adrenalin you can STOP the flow of blood.

And with Adrenalin, as in the case of this criminal, you can force the heart to start beating again, after it has stopped and its owner is "dead."

But more mysterious and interesting than all glands is this question:

WHAT BECAME OF THAT CRIMINAL'S SOUL BEFORE HE WAS BROUGHT BACK TO LIFE?

The man was really "dead." If the Adrenalin had not been injected into his heart muscle, bringing him back for a few hours, he would have gone to his slab in the morgue, thence to the potter's field, and the worms. His eyes would never have opened in this life again.

What happened to the gangster's soul after his heart stopped? What happened when the doctor forced it to start beating again?

Did the soul, when the heart stopped, depart on its long journey, returning to make the man's mouth tell the truth when life was temporarily restored?

Or does the soul "stay around" for a while after we call "death," to make sure that the body has REALLY died and is no longer a fit habitation for a living soul?

Those questions the doctors and philosophers with all their science and wisdom cannot answer.

On the other hand, the science that takes an extract from the gland of an animal, injects it into the heart muscle of a human being apparently dead and brings back life, comes close to the miraculous and commands the respect, even of the ignorant and prejudiced.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The softest spot in America for the personable young bachelor with a pronounced aversion for work is New York. He may—and many do—live in comparative splendor indefinitely without turning a well manicured hand to honest toil.

The town is so full of busy husbands intent on getting ahead and providing an estate for their families that the acceptable bachelor is becoming a part of the personnel in many homes. Husbands who haven't time for social affairs find a trusting celibataire.

This is not a signal for every bachelor to quit his job and romp to New York expecting to live on milk and honey. The standard demands certain requirements. The bachelor must be fairly young, good looking, have a flair for correct clothes and agreeable conversation. And, of course, the romantic touch of silver in his hair.

It is understood he is not to fall in love with ladies he escorts about. His job is to be on call for dinner engagement, for the theatre, the opera, the night club and all the multifarious activities of the social whirl.

While there is no regular stipend, he mingles with people who are always able to turn an honest penny his way without making him feel the moocher. The formula is quite simple. The husband is generally a man of affairs who makes frequent financial investments.

"I am having George," explains the wife, "buy you several hundred shares of such-and-such. His broker will bill you." Instead George's broker sends him a sizable check for his share of the winnings. His "winnings" are usually more than he could earn.

The bachelor of this type is rarely a philanderer. He is hep to a good thing and intends nursing it by being a perfect gentleman at all times. Any undue advantage of this arrangement ends the association. Thus the bachelor may become another society keptee.

When a writer receives a letter beginning: "You are such a human person!" he sniffs the old oil. He is going to be asked to read a manuscript or to find out if there is some antique dealer who would be interested in an 1850 gate-legged table. Writers are not so human. That is another literary legend. And very rancid.

Dramatic critics stick to the sinking ships and rarely desert the premier of a play that is a "turkey." They try to remain for the final curtain. But one play this summer stretched patience to the breaking point. The audience disappeared after the first intermission. Fifteen minutes later critics were sneaking out and for the first time in the history of the Rialto the house was empty before the performance was over.

As a quondam critic I know no anguish like that of sitting helplessly to watch a show in the death agonies of a flop. The manner is that of a slowly deflating balloon. The performers, in their excitement, are the last to realize the predicament and carry-on against odds that are pathetic.

Love letter from San Diego, Cal.: "Dear Whistle Breeches: California is beginning to feel rugged and western now that you have departed along with your spats, awning striped shirts and walking stick. If you don't come back for 20 years it will be too soon."

And a grammatical precisionist who seems to be in the subjunctive or some other sort of mood has been bombarding me with frequent letters for about a month. He deplores not only my own rhetorical lapses but those of my fellows. Recently he dared me to parse one of my sentences right out in print and declared if I didn't he would expose me. The situation is extremely awkward. I promised the folks when I left home I would never parse in public.
